U. S. Asks Russia Not To Press Demands on Finland

Norway, Sweden, Danes Also Intercede in Move To Save Little Nation

Hope Expressed That Nothing Will Be Done To Menace Country's Independence

Washington, Oct. 12 (AP)—Swinging into diplomatic action in behalf of Finland, the United States urged Russia, in effect, today not to press any demands which would lead to strife with her little Baltic neighbor.

While Finland prepared to resist any demands such as have made Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania virtual protectorates of Soviet Russia, United States Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt called at the Kremlin in Moscow. Later the state department here gave this explanation of his mission:

"The government of the United States has expressed to the government of the union of Soviet socialist republics its earnest hope that nothing would occur that would be calculated to affect injuriously the peaceful relations between Soviet Russia and Finland.

"This is a unilateral and entirely independent action of the United States government."

Not Joining With Others

The last sentence was apparently appended to make clear that the American move had no connection with similar steps taken by Norway, Sweden and Denmark. Those nations expressed the hope that Russo-Finnish negotiations now in progress would spell no danger to Finland's independence or neutrality.

The United States action today was the second move involving Russia in the past few days. The first was a statement of Secretary of State Hull that this government refused to recognize the disappearance of Poland, despite its partition by Germany and Russia.

On Capitol Hill, where Finland has created much good will by paying her war debts on the dot, the available comment on today's move appeared favorable. Speaker Bankhead said he considered Finland "admirable from a fiscal standpoint —small but honest." He said he was for "peace in the whole world, or in pieces of the world, if we can get it without involvement."

Discussing the state department's stand in the Finnish-Russian situation, Chairman Pittman (D-Nev) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told reporters it was "in accord with the customary exchanges between friendly governments."

"It is entirely appropriate to take such a step before a war begins," he said. "It might be regarded as intervention after war had been declared."

Meantime, it seemed that Prime

Nazi Patrols Said To Have Suffered Hundreds of Casualties

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

Paris, Oct. 12 (AP)—French forces on th Western front resumed their attacks on the German lines tonight after five days of defensive action in which the high command said German thrusts had been turned back.

Military dispatches said that all along the 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine rivers, French troops were pressing assaults towards the major objective of Saarbruecken, key city of the German Saar.

Operations still fell short of a general offensive, but it was indicated the French had taken the initiative away from the Germans.

Engage Advance Guard

The general staff's communique tonight tersely referred to the renewed onslaught as "activity of our advance elements." Military advices, however, said the French patrols had engaged in several encounters with the German advance guard.

French reports said German patrols sufered "hundreds" of casualties when on the offensive, and the French very few.

The southern approach to the city is guarded by the Winterberg fort, one of the principal works of the Siegfried line.

The first party of nine accredited English war correspondents to visit the western front returned with word that the line between the Moselee and the Saar rivers was holding firm despite German counter-attacks, which started Sunday and continued until today.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 12 (AP)—The nation and the state, with the Texas Publishers' Association as host, paid tribute tonight to George Bannerman Dealey, eighty-year-old publisher of the Dallas Morning News, upon the completion of sixty-five years of unbroken service with one newspaper organization.

No leader in American journalism can match that record, and President Roosevelt, senators, representatives, business men and publishers took cognizance of the fact with messages of congratulations and best wishes.

The medium of their expression came through a banquet tendered by the state publishers group, meeting in convention here.

Mr. Dealey began work Oct. 12, 1874, as an office boy with the Galveston News, owned then by the A. H. Belo corporation, at a $3 a week salary.

Office boy, mailing room worker, correspondent—the climb was fast, and when the corporation decided to establish a north Texas paper, G. B. Dealey was chosen to do the work.

He helped establish the Dallas Morning News, finally becoming its president and publisher in 1919.

Bremen Cook Describes Trip across the Ocean

E. Post, Netherlander Tells About Eluding British Warships

Amsterdam, Oct. 12 (AP)—A hasty disguise and the swirling mists of the North Atlantic helped the German merchant flagship Bremen to make a perilous voyage through strange waters and reach safe harbor in the Russian artic port of Murmansk, a member of her crew related today.

The crewman was E. Post, tall, blond seagoing cook, and the only Netherland aboard.

In a copyrighted interview with the Amsterdam newspaper Het Volk, Post told of repainting of the ship at sea after her delayed departure from New York, Aug. 30, of the anxiety aboard and finally of the Bremen's reaching Murmansk with the hammer and sickle flying.

(The Bremen was held in New York two days while U. S. customs men searched her for possible armaments and finally sailed thirty-six hours before Germany invaded Poland.)

Dodges British Blockade

Without passengers or cargo, but with 900 seamen, Capt. Adolf Ahrens was reported by post to have dodged the British blockade with gasoline drums on the deck of his $20,000,000 ship, ready to burn and sink her if need be.

Archbishop Curley Now Head of D. C. and Baltimore Archdioceses

Washington, Oct. 12—Archbishop Michael J. Curley celebrated his sixtieth birthday today with an honor which is described by his friends and associates as unique in the Catholic Church in this country if not in the world. Known in the past as the Archbishop of Baltimore, he will be known in the future as the Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington.

He is the only Archbishop of his Church in the United States who is the head of two archdioceses of equal rank.

Seen at his residence, he made no effort to conceal his pleasure at today's announcement by the apostolic delegation in Washington that th District of Columbia, including Washington, had been raised by action in Rome from the status of a part of the Baltimore archdiocese to that of an archdiocese in its own right.

It was the seat of the Federal Government, he said, and, therefore it was fitting that it should be an archdiocese.

Friends of the archbishop say the announcement was timed for his birthday for the purpose of honoring him. He waves away references to added honors for himself with the statement that he cannot deny that he is 60 years old, since he was born (in Ireland) on October 12, 1879.

At some fuutre date not yet fixed there will be ceremonies for the installation of Archbirshop Curley as the Archbishop of Washington, ceremonies like those that took place when he was installed the Archbishop of Baltimore. They will be held in St. Matthew's Church, on Rhode Island avenue near Seventeenth street, which becomes the Cathedral of the Washington archdiocese.

The Apostlic Delegate, the Most Reverend Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, will confer the dignity after the formal papers arrive from Rome.

Chamberlain Says There Can Be No Truce with Nazis

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press

A stern British finger has been raised pointing Germany to a seat on the mourner's bench as the only way to peace in Europe.

Prime Minister Chamberlain has warned the people of Germany that only through acts, not words, can they persuade the Franco-British Allies to refrain from waging war "to the utmost of our strength." He echoed Premier Daladier's declaration that there can be no "truce" with Hitlerism.

That this British fiat brings the Hitler peace offensive to a dead end can hardly be doubted. In fact, the word was passed in Berlin yesterday that the chancellor would now begin war in earnest against the Allies.

Fuehrer Plans Action as Chamberlain Rejects His Offer To Stop Fighting

Said To Have Decided That Further Talk Is Useless and That "Guns Must Speak"; Hope To Get Direct Military Assistance from Russia and Italy; German Liner Captured by British

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Berlin, Oct. 13—(Friday)—(AP)—Adolf Hitler early today indirectly asked President Roosevelt to intervene in the European war by advising Britain to meet Germany in conference.

Failuré of the United States to do this, the Fuehrer indicated, would result in his unleashing a "war in earnest" against Great Britain and France.

The Fuehrer's views were given to foreign correspondents by his trusted press chief, Dr. Otto Dietrich, after a conference of several hours which followed a word-by-word study by Hitler of British Prime Minister Chamberlain's rejection Thursday of Germany's peace terms.

By The Associated Press

Adolph Hitler, after studying Britain's rejection of his peace terms, was represented by his press chief early today as being ready to unleash a "war in earnest" against Britain and France unless the United States intervenes.

The press chief, Dr. Otto Dietrich, said upon emerging from a long conference with the fuehrer that it was within the power of the United States to prevent "the most gruesome bloodbath in history."

Hitler, he said, would delay giving the command for a gigantic scale war in the west if there was any indication President Roosevelt was likely to tell British Prime Minister Chamberlain that he must meet Germany in conference.

Dietrich threatened attack upon British ships and coastal points by as many as 800 bombing planes flying in waves.

He fermed the speech of Chamberlain before Parliament yesterday an "insolent reply" to Hitler's proposals of last Friday.

Chamberlain told Parliament that Britain could not make any peace with Hitler based on "recognition of his conquests and his right to do what he pleases with the conquered," and that "it is no longer possible to rely upon the unsupported word of the present German government."

Hitler studied Chamberlain's speech for three hours with his advisers and was reported to have decided finally that further talk is useless and that "guns must speak."

Moreover, Nazi sources said, consultations would be held immediately with Italy and Soviet Russia to learn what direct military assistance might be forthcoming from them.

VIOLENT HOSTILITIES EXPECTED

Thus was foreshadowed possible outbreak soon of hostilities on a more violent scale than has characterized the war in the west to date. High German quarters had been pictured as hoping that war with Britain and France could be ended in view of the disappearance of Poland in the east.

Russia, receiving a delegation from Finland for conferences similar to those in which she won concessions from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, was urged by the United States, Norway, Sweden and Denmark not to undertake anything that might harm relations between Russia and Finland.

The four nations acted independently, the United States first. In diplomatic language, the United States expressed "its earnest hope" that nothing may occur which would "affect injuriously" Russian-Finnish relations.

HOPE TO SAVE FINLAND

The three Scandinavian powers expressed hope that the Moscow negotiations would not endanger Finnish independence or neutrality.

Whereas Estonia, Latvia and Lithuanian sent missions to Moscow which peacefully acceded to Soviet demands for air and naval bases, Finland's leaders, strongly backed by Sweden's moral support, displayed a determination to resist making such concessions as the Baltic states granted.

The Finnish delegation held a one-hour preliminary meeting at the Kremlin with Joseph Stalin, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, premier-foreign commissar, and their aides. Another conference was set for this afternoon.

Finland was pictured as willing to accept any "reasonable" proposals but determined to fight against any de-

CIO Plans 1940 Political Fight; No Reference to 3rd Term for FDR

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (AP)—Delegates to the CIO international convention rose in a body tonight to shout endorsement of resolutions which condemned the National Labor Relations Board.

"This convention commends to all CIO afifiliates a most sparing and considerate use of the Wagner Act in the future," said one resolution.

The board and its administrative policies were flayed by Philip Murray, head of the steel workers' organizing committee, and Van A. Bittner, official of the packing house workers' organizing committee, in address punctuated by Delegates' cheers.

Detroit, Oct. 12 (AP)—The CIO United Automobile Workers Union, which has given notice of intent to strike in all Chrysler Corpration plants, insisted today that it be given a voice in the fixing of production speeds, a matter which the corpration contends is a function of the management.

A dispute which at first centered in speed of assembly lines in the main plant of Chrysler's Dodge division has resulted in idleness for more than 50,000 employes in Chrysler plants and in Briggs manufacturing Co., units dependent on the Dodge plant for parts.

The only Chrysler plant operating in the Detroit area today was the Dodge truck plant in nearby Macomb county, where production work was about half normal, with less than 1,000 employes working.

Union officials said that during the five-day wait required by the State Labor Relations Act before a strike can be called, they would obtain strike authorization from Chrysler UAW-CIO local unions.

The union contends that only by gaining a voice on fixing of production schedules can it expect to halt what it terms a "speed-up" of assembly lines.

With most of their plants idle, Chrysler executives entered negotiations with UAW-CIO leaders on a new contract to supplant one which expired Sept. 30.

The Dode management last week dismissed sixty-four workers it contended were responsible for a "slowdown" on the production lines. The union is insisting that these be reemployed.

"This convention commends to all CIO afiiliates a most sparing and considerate use of the Wagner Act in the future," said one resolution.

The board and its administrative policies were flayed by Phillip Murray, head of the steel workers' organizing committee, and Van A. Bittner, official of the packing house workers' organizing committee, in address punctuated by Delegates' cheers.

Detroit, Oct. 12 (AP)—The CIO United Automobile Workers Union, which has given notice of intent to strike in all Chrysler Corpration plants, insisted today that it be given a voice in the fixing of production speeds, a matter which the corpration contends is a function of the management.

A dispute which at first centered in speed of assembly lines in the main plant of Chrysler's Dodge division has resulted in idleness for more than 50,000 employes in Chrysler plants and in Briggs manufacturing Co., units dependent on the Dodge plant for parts.

The only Chrysler plant operating in the Detroit area today was the Dodge truck plant in nearby Macomb county, where production work was about half normal, with less than 1,000 employes working.

Union officials said that during the five-day wait required by the State Labor Relations Act before a strike can be called, they would obtain strike authorization from Chrysler UAW-CIO local unions.

The union contends that only by gaining a voice on fixing of production schedules can it expect to halt what it terms a "speed-up" of assembly lines.

With most of their plants idle, Chrysler executives entered negotiations with UAW-CIO leaders on a new contract to supplant one which expired Sept. 30.

The Dode management last week dismissed sixty-four workers it contended were responsible for a "slowdown" on the production lines. The union is insisting that these be reemployed.

Green Reelected Head of A.F.O.L. For His 16th Term

William L. Hutcheson Is Elected First Vice President

By T. F. COMAN

Cincinnati, Oct. 12 (AP)—Nearing the close of its 59th annual convention, the American Federation of Labor reelected William Green as president for his 16th term today, effected two major changes in leadership and chose New Orleans as the site of the 1940 convention.

Delegates eleveated George Meany of New York City to the post of secretary-treasurer, succeeding white-haired Frank Morrison, and named William L. Hutcheson of Indianapolis, head of the Carpenters union, to the first vice presidency.

Hutcheson replaced Frank Duffy, also of the carpenters' organiaztion. Morrison, near 80, and Duffy, 77, were the two oldest members of the federation council, and announced they were stepping down to make way for younger leaders. Duffy has been first vice president for twenty-six years.

A short time before, delegates were told by Homer Martin, youthful president of the Auto Workers' Union, that the real purpose of John L. Lewis's Congress of Industrial Organization was to "destroy the American labor movement," and in the wake of a dramtic demonstration for Morrison, were plunged into hot debate over the 37-year old jurisdictional war between the Teamsters and Brewery Workers' Union.

The retirement of Morrison, who became secretary-emeritus on a $6,000 a year pension, has been foreseast but Duffy's refusal to seek reelection came as a surprise.

Morrison has been a familiar figure in the trade union movement for fifty years, distinguished by his partiality for a stand-up collar and a black bow tie. He became secretary-treasurer in 1896.

As he reliquished office, he declared he would devote his energies to restotration of his International Typographical Union to good standing in the AFL. The ITU was denied convention seats for refusal to pay a specific assessment.

Meany, Morrison's successor, is forty-five years old, a member of the Plumbers' Union, and for the past five years president of the New York State Federation of Labor.

Hutcheson served on the executive council from 1934 to 1936, retiring then because the carpenters already were represented by Duffy on the powerful labor body.

All other members of the council, composed of fifteen AFL vice presidents, were reelected.

In a brief acceptance speech, Green said:

"I feel in the coming year we are going to face great and grave responsibilities. I hope I may have the support and strength of the federation."

Referring only briefly to his leadership of the fight against CIO he said: "The American Federation of Labor stands today as the victor in the fight with dualism and rebellion."

Chamberlain

was as unthinkable as Allied accepfance of the Hitler appeal for a peace that would recognize the partition of Poland as an irrevocable fact. There seems no middle ground between the Hitler proposal and the Franco-British counter demand for fulprestoration not only of Poland, but of Czecho-Slovakia, and for further unspecified "guarantees" of German good faith.

Unquestionably the Chamberlain reply was addressed to the German people rather than to the Nazi government. It attempted to go over the German Fuehrer's head to reach public sentiment in Germany, just as Hitler's recent speech was aimed primarily at peace yearnings among the people of France, England, and the world.

In effect, the Chamberlain counter-formula calls for a turning back of the clock to the days of the Munich conference. It raises, for the contemplation of Germany, the prospect of a peace of appeasement such as Chamberlain sought at Munich, but it makes plain that suitable "guarantees" must be forthcoming first. The implication is that the only "guarantee" which could lead to suspension of the war on Germany is elimination of Hitler and the Nazi regime by action of the German people themselves.

Striking Passages

Here are striking passages from the Chamberlain reply, significantly terse in contrast to the 10,000 word Hitler speech to the Reichstag.

"It is no longer possible to rely upon the unsupported word of the present German government."

"What stands in the way of peace? It is the German government, and the German government alone."

"It is no part of our (Franco-British) policy to exclude from her rightful place in Europe a Germany which will live in amity and confidence with other nations."

There are a dozen other hints that a Germany minus Hitler and Nazi methods would find France and Britain ready to meet her more than half way in a conference table readjustment of European problems considered unjust. In line with this, women and children continued to flee from the capital, Helsinki, for safer countryside and there were intense military defense preparations.

Hitler Plans "War in Earnest" Indirectly Appeals to Roosevelt

CAPTURED GERMAN LINER

With Britain reporting the capture of the 13,615-ton German liner Cap Norte in the South Atlantic, shipping circles in Buenos Aires considered it possible that the speedy vessel was the German raider which sank the 5,051-ton Brtiish freighter Clement, on a North American run, off the Brazilian coast Oct. 1. Conjecture previously had centered on the possibility the attacker was the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer.

On the Western front French forces resumed attacks on the German lines after five days of defense against German thrusts. The French troops were reported active all along the 100-mile front between the Rhine and Moselle rivers. It was indicated the French had taken the initiative away from the Germans.

Dietrich Says U. S. Can Prevent War Between Germany and Allies

Berlin, Oct. 13.—(Friday)—(AP)—Adolf Hitler is ready to order a total war against Britain and France, but one power—the United States—can yet intervene to prevent the "most gruesome bloodbath in history," foreign correspondents were told today.

Emerging from a conference of several hours with the Fuehrer, Dr. Otto Dietrich, Reich's press chief, expressed his conviction to a small group of correspondents that Britain risked her "insolent reply" to Hitler through Prime Minister Chamberlain only because she relied upon the United States to support her.

Hitler, after a three-hour word-by-word study of the Chamberlain speech of yesterday in which the prime minister rejected the Fuehrer's peace overtures, was reliably reported to have determined upon a "war in earnest" against Britain and France in the west.

The United States, Dr. Dietrich expounded, could put an end to the war if she unequivocally told Britain she would not support her unless efforts to settle the problems at issue were first made at the council table.

Every German, Hitler's trusted lieutenant said, was enraged that Chamberlain had nowhere indicated a willingness to sit down to talk things over with Germany.

May Delay Action

Hitler, Dr. Dietrich said he felt sure, would even now delay giving the command for taking up the western campaign on a gigantic scale if there was any indication President Roosevelt was likely to tell Chamberlain in no uncertain terms that he must express his readiness to meet Germany in conference.

Chamberlain's speech, he said, indicated determination to annihilate the German people.

"Let's see who will be annihilated," the press chief added with a determined snap of his jaw.

Germany, in the opinion of other prominent Nazis who joined in the conference, thus far has not even attempted a display of her air powers in the west.

Never were more than two dozen planes massed for an attack, they said.

But before Modlin, in Poland, they said, 800 power diving bombers had been let loose.

Could Do Great Damage

A similar number unleashed against British ships and strategic coastal points, they declared, could do untold damage.

Dietrich said that with Russia ready to support Germany and Italy willing to remain neutral or become belligerent — whatever might seem better to the general staffs—he considered German unbeatable.

It would be easier, he asserted, for Germany to blockade England than for England to starve out Germany.

Dietrich said he regarded Chamberlain's speech as one of the most stupid he had read from any statesman.

He declared it was totally void of vision or comprehension of the world situation.

The German people would be welded together more closely than ever because of the insolence of that speech and England's apparent determination to try to annihilate Germany, the Fuehrer's press chief concluded.

Earlier, as Hitler concluded his study of the Chamberlain speech in close consultation with his advisors, informed sources said he had decided his six-day peace efforts were hopeless.

Accordingly he had dropped such efforts, and summoned his general staff to take charge of the war in the west.

Hitler Summons General Staff To Plan To Prosecute War in West

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Oct. 12 (AP) — Fuehrer Adolf Hitler has decided to wage war in earnest against Britain and France, after having weighed Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech today and found it wanting.

The fuehrer halted his six-day peace effort informed sources said, and summoned his general staff to take care of the war in the west, this action followed a three-hour word-for-word study of the British Prime Minister's reply to his peace overtures.

With his closest advisers, Hitler was said to have decided that the British government was "determined to fight to destroy the German people."

Germany now holds, informed quarters said, that further parleys are useless and that arms must speak.

The Nazis said they had hoped until the last that some means of obtaining peace could be found, now that their war aims in the east have been fulfilled with the conquest of Poland.

Look for Air Activity

Activity in the air, which Germany believes to be her best ace, was expected to be the first evidence that the war in the wast was emerged from one of watchful waiting into a fight to the finish.

This action was awaited against blockading British ships in an effort to establish what for the Nazis is one of their most important strategic problems at present, namely:

"Can the blockade be broken by the combined use of airplanes, submarines and surface craft?"

At any rate, Nazis said, those who interpreted Hitler's peace efforts as a sign of weakness soon would learn their mistake.

Diplomatically, it was said that consultations with Joseph Stalin of Soviet Russia and Premier Mussolini of Italy would be held immediately to determine what aid, if any, Germany may expect now that the die is considered cast with Britain and France.

Will Russia Fight?

The question of direct Russian military assistance will be raised, it was asserted. Soviet Premier - Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff is expected in Nazi quarters to visit Berlin some time this month.

It still was believed to be undecided whether Mussolini would be asked to join actively, as the general staff apparently was not certain whether Italy could be of more use as a neutral than as a belligerent.

In coming to his decision Hitler was aided by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and their respective foreign office and military advisers.

Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons today that it was "impossible" to accept Adolf Hitler's terms without forfeiting the British claim "that international disputes should be settled by discussion and not by force" was studied in the chancellery by the fuehrer and his foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

The first reaction by lesser officials was that the British leader had straddled the issue, but this, it was believed, would not be Germany's ultimate interpretation of his speech.

Bombers Ordered To Attack

Yesterday's announcement that bombers had been ordered to attack the British fleet in the North Sea and the stepping up of the home war propaganda in tonight's press were regarded by some observers as signs the German government was beginning to take the view the war would continue.

Informed quarters had stated that propaganda at home had not started yet.

But tonight's press was afire with headlines and stories that might be interpreted as the opening guns in a home campaign.

Stories were published accusing Great Britain of providing Poland with poison gas and proclaiming that Britain's mastery of the North Sea had given way to Germany through the use of airplanes.

Great Britain Denies Reports

(Great Britain denied a German report issued Wednesday night that she had supplied gas to Poland for use against German soldiers.)

"London impressed by our bomb attack on warships," one headline said, while Der Angriff, newspaper of minister of propaganda Paul Joseph Goebbels, said in large type:

"We show the world in pictures England's mustard gas violation."

It published a large picture of a partly bandaged man lying on a cot.

The army high command reported there was nothing of importance on the western front—only minor scouting and artillery activity and "a little air scouting activity over the North Sea and in the west."

It reported that a French plane had been shot down in combat.

Berlin's population on Saturday and Sunday will be given the chance to see some of the material brought back by the army from Poland where today's communique said the Bug river was reached at several points.

Display in Unter den Linden

Selected specimens—just what was not disclosed—will be on display in Unted den Linden, in the heart of the city, as a part of the winter relief collection.

The authorities meanwhile were cutting further into the private use of automobiles in order to save gasoline.

Taxis and some automobiles were being altered to use compressed gas while portions of the small fleet of cars which still were running have been ordered off the streets.

Furthermore, taxis no longer may be used merely for convenience. Urgent necessity is the only reason accepted by the taxie drivers.

New Type Bomber Made for France Seen at Aberdeen

War Plane Has Speed of More Than 300 Miles Per Hour

By DEVON FRANCIS

Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., Oct. 12—A sample of a fast attack bombing plane which the French air force will receive in quantities if and when Congress votes for the export of war materials to belligerents was seen today by visitors.

Capable of more than 300 miles an hour top speed at high altitudes, it carries a crew of three and 1,200 pounds of demolition bombs.

The planes are being manufactured in quantity by the Glenn L. Martin Company of Baltimore. The French ordered 200 of them before the European war started.

Though it was not on display for the 20th annual meeting of the Army Ordnance Association, held at the proving grounds today, it had been staked down in an area not restricted to several thousand visitors.

Delivered to Air Corps

It was one of two machines of the same type delivered to the army air corps. It differs from the ones intended for the French only in the armament and instruments.

Several dozen of the planes, which weight about 15,000 pounds fully loaded, are stored "somewhere in the vicinity of New York" in crates plainly marked with the red and blue of the French air force.

With a bullet-like fuselage, the plane is powered with two wing-Nacelle 1,200 horsepower Pratt & Whitney motors. Duralimin plates in the fuselage and wing are flush-riveted to reduce air resistance.

Ship Well Armed

A bombardier sits in the nose, the pilot just aft of him and above, and behind the pilot the machine gunner who operates both a top turret and a belly machine gun. The plane is a mid-wing, in that the wing approximately bisects the height of the fuselage. Electrically operated bomb racks are built forward of the belly machine gun position.

The fuselage approaches the pencil design characteristic of German bombers.

Norway, Sweden

Minister Chamberlain's speech turning down Chancellor Hitler's peace terms had eliminated any chance that the United States would intervene as a mediator soon in the European war. Berlin had indicated that it would welcome such action, but informed persons here had predicted that this government would make no move for an armistice unless assured in advance that it would be acceptable to the Allies.

Senator Barkley (D-Ky), the majority leader, said the Chamberlain speech had decreased chances for an armistice because "Chamberlain made it clear he didn't want peace on Hitler's terms."

Senator King (D-Utah) said that if Russia and Germany interpreted the Chamberlain speech to mean war to the death on "Hitlerism," a "peace offensive" by neutrals would be useless, but that if Hitler and Stalin still showed a desire to negotiate, neutrals might propose a conference to "pave the way for a reduction of armaments and a sound peace."

Three Nations Join in Move To Help Finland

Copehagen, Oct. 12 (AP) — Norway, Sweden and Denmark, in representations to Moscow, have expressed the hope that the negotiations with Finland will bring no danger to that country's independence or neutrality in view of the European conflict.

The ministers of the three countries separately presented notes in Moscow expressing their "interest in the negotiations between the Soviet government and Finland," it was announced here in the Danish capital.

The notes were identical in text, and declared the three Scandinavian countries expected "nothing to occur which would prevent Finland from continuing independently to maintain her neutral position."

(Earlier today the United States through Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt in Moscow, expressed a hope to the Kremlin that Soviet Russia's terms to Finland would be lenient.)

The text of the notes of the Scandinavian governments to Moscow follows:

Express Optimism

"All the northern governments follow with interest the negotiations begun between the Soviet government and Finland. They express the expectation that nothing will occur which would prevent Finland from continuing independently to maintain her neutral position, which she maintains with other northern countries, and we wish the negotiations to cement friendly relations between Finland and Soviet Russia."

The Scandinavian countries have followed with increasing concern the Rusian entrance into the turbulent European picture and especially her growing dominance in the Northern Baltic.

Spokesmen first expressed their worries when Moscow opened negotiations with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania and won air and naval bases which advanced Soviet armed power some 150 miles closer to their shores.

The invitation to Finland to come to Moscow to talk over mutual interests greatly increased the concern, with the Swedish press declaring the question was of concern not only to Finland but to all northern European countries.

One reason for their disquiet had been the issue of the Aaland islands which guard the junction of the Gulf of Bothnia with the Baltic.

Seek To Fortify Islands

Sweden and Finland sought jointly to fortify these islands last spring. France and England agreed but Russia objected. The islands, if fortified by a hostile power, would control extensive commercial shipping of Finland and Sweden, not the least of which is ore shipments from Sweden.

The islands, once Russian, along with Finland, have been under joint Finnish and Swedish jurisdiction since Finnish independence became effective in 1920. The possibility that Russia might want military and naval privileges there such as she has gained in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania was acknowledged as one worry by Scandinavian commentators.

The Finns have declared they would fight before yielding to any demands.

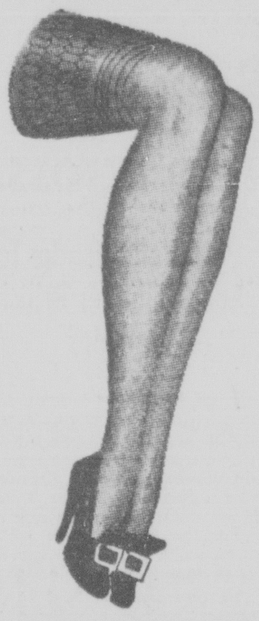

Belligerent Goose Eats Blue Ribbon

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 12 (AP)—A belligerent gray goose, which last year ate his blue ribbon and attacked a show attendant, was the liveliest and loudest attraction today at the opening of Wicomico county's fourth annual farm and home show.

A driving rainstorm in the morning delayed the placing of exhibits of farm produce, poultry, needlework, and baked and canned goods until after noon.

"London impressed by our bomb attack on warships," one headline said, while Der Angriff, newspaper of minister of propaganda Paul Joseph Goebbels, said in large type:

"We show the world in pictures England's mustard gas violation." It published a large picture of a partly bandaged man lying on a cot.

The army high command reported there was nothing of importance on the western front—only minor scouting and artillery activity and "a little air scouting activity over the North Sea and in the west."

It reported that a French plane had been shot down in combat.

Berlin's population on Saturday and Sunday will be given the chance to see some of the material brought back by the army from Poland where today's communique said the Bug river was reached at several points.

Display in Unter den Linden

Selected specimens—just what was not disclosed—will be on display in Unted den Linden, in the heart of the city, as a part of the winter relief collection.

The authorities meanwhile were cutting further into the private use of automobiles in order to save gasoline.

Taxis and some automobiles were being altered to use compressed gas while portions of the small fleet of cars which still were running have been ordered off the streets.

Furthermore, taxis no longer may be used merely for convenience. Urgent necessity is the only reason accepted by the taxie drivers.

By DEVON FRANCIS

Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., Oct. 12—A sample of a fast attack bombing plane which the French air force will receive in quantities if and when Congress votes for the export of war materials to belligerents was seen today by visitors.

Capable of more than 300 miles an hour top speed at high altitudes, it carries a crew of three and 1,200 pounds of demolition bombs.

The planes are being manufactured in quantity by the Glenn L. Martin Company of Baltimore. The French ordered 200 of them before the European war started.

Though it was not on display for the 20th annual meeting of the Army Ordnance Association, held at the proving grounds today, it had been staked down in an area not restricted to several thousand visitors.

Delivered to Air Corps

It was one of two machines of the same type delivered to the army air corps. It differs from the ones intended for the French only in the armament and instruments.

Several dozen of the planes, which weight about 15,000 pounds fully loaded, are stored "somewhere in the vicinity of New York" in crates plainly marked with the red and blue of the French air force.

With a bullet-like fuselage, the plane is powered with two wing-Nacelle 1,200 horsepower Pratt & Whitney motors. Duralimin plates in the fuselage and wing are flush-riveted to reduce air resistance.

Ship Well Armed

A bombardier sits in the nose, the pilot just aft of him and above, and behind the pilot the machine gunner who operates both a top turret and a belly machine gun. The plane is a mid-wing, in that the wing approximately bisects the height of the fuselage. Electrically operated bomb racks are built forward of the belly machine gun position.

Minister Chamberlain's speech turning down Chancellor Hitler's peace terms had eliminated any chance that the United States would intervene as a mediator soon in the European war. Berlin had indicated that it would welcome such action, but informed persons here had predicted that this government would make no move for an armistice unless assured in advance that it would be acceptable to the Allies.

Senator Barkley (D-Ky), the majority leader, said the Chamberlain speech had decreased chances for an armistice because "Chamberlain made it clear he didn't want peace on Hitler's terms."

Senator King (D-Utah) said that if Russia and Germany interpreted the Chamberlain speech to mean war to the death on "Hitlerism," a "peace offensive" by neutrals would be useless, but that if Hitler and Stalin still showed a desire to negotiate, neutrals might propose a conference to "pave the way for a reduction of armaments and a sound peace."

Three Nations Join in Move To Help Finland

Copehagen, Oct. 12 (AP) — Norway, Sweden and Denmark, in representations to Moscow, have expressed the hope that the negotiations with Finland will bring no danger to that country's independence or neutrality in view of the European conflict.

The ministers of the three countries separately presented notes in Moscow expressing their "interest in the negotiations between the Soviet government and Finland," it was announced here in the Danish capital.

The notes were identical in text, and declared the three Scandinavian countries expected "nothing to occur which would prevent Finland from continuing independently to maintain her neutral position."

(Earlier today the United States through Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt in Moscow, expressed a hope to the Kremlin that Soviet Russia's terms to Finland would be lenient.)

The text of the notes of the Scandinavian governments to Moscow follows:

Express Optimism

"All the northern governments follow with interest the negotiations begun between the Soviet government and Finland. They express the expectation that nothing will occur which would prevent Finland from continuing independently to maintain her neutral position, which she maintains with other northern countries, and we wish the negotiations to cement friendly relations between Finland and Soviet Russia."

The Scandinavian countries have followed with increasing concern the Rusian entrance into the turbulent European picture and especially her growing dominance in the Northern Baltic.

Spokesmen first expressed their worries when Moscow opened negotiations with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania and won air and naval bases which advanced Soviet armed power some 150 miles closer to their shores.

The invitation to Finland to come to Moscow to talk over mutual interests greatly increased the concern, with the Swedish press declaring the question was of concern not only to Finland but to all northern European countries.

One reason for their disquiet had been the issue of the Aaland islands which guard the junction of the Gulf of Bothnia with the Baltic.

Seek To Fortify Islands

Sweden and Finland sought jointly to fortify these islands last spring. France and England agreed but Russia objected. The islands, if fortified by a hostile power, would control extensive commercial shipping of Finland and Sweden, not the least of which is ore shipments from Sweden.

The islands, once Russian, along with Finland, have been under joint Finnish and Swedish jurisdiction since Finnish independence became effective in 1920. The possibility that Russia might want military and naval privileges there such as she has gained in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania was acknowledged as one worry by Scandinavian commentators.

The Finns have declared they would fight before yielding to any demands.

Belligerent Goose Eats Blue Ribbon

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 12 (AP)—A belligerent gray goose, which last year ate his blue ribbon and attacked a show attendant, was the liveliest and loudest attraction today at the opening of Wicomico county's fourth annual farm and home show.

A driving rainstorm in the morning delayed the placing of exhibits of farm produce, poultry, needlework, and baked and canned goods until after noon.

Only One Ism

ADDRESSING the annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs the other day in San Francisco, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, repeated an injunction previously given in a public statement on which comment was made in these columns.

Hoover gave warning that in the wave of patriotism that is rising in this country, there lies a danger from over-zealous groups or individuals engaging in acts that are distinctly un-American in method, no matter how patriotic in aim. Some groups and movements, as heretofore noted, do not even have that aim. His further stress on that warning is well worth noting.

"We need no vigilantes in this situation," Hoover said at San Francisco. "The vigilante method is distinctly contrary to American ideals of justice. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been called upon to investigate all matters relating to espionage, sabotage, and violations of the neutrality regulations. In turn the Federal Bureau of Investigation has requested co-operation of all law enforcement officers in the United States.

"This combined attack by federal and state forces should be sufficient so far as investigation and prosecution are concerned. Beyond the efforts of these law enforcement agencies there is a need, of course, for the individual co-operation of all sincere and earnest Americans. This co-operation should be limited, however, to passing on to the proper officials all questionable facts or rumors which may come one's way. An alert public is the best defense against traitorous or inimical conduct. Let us be realistic and practical, ever alert to the dangers which we know lurk in practically every community in the land, but always calm in our judgment between the real and unreal.

"I have said before and I say again—America has room for only one ism—Americanism. All other isms are inimical to the best interests of our nation. Let no smoke screen descend upon you, blinding your vision from the pitfalls that lie ahead. Let there be no misunderstanding as to the meaning of true Americanism. It is an abiding adherence to our democracy that sprang from the Declaration of Independence and is defined by the Bill of Rights and the Constitution. Loyalty to those principles is Americanism.

"Its ideals are translated in a wholesome respect and obedience to the laws of the land. It is holding high the banners of law and order. Americanism represents liberty. It is respect for all nations without entangling alliances. It is free worship without bigotry. It is truth without distortion of fact. Americanism is love for our time-honored institutions. Americanism is that desire, that willingness, that determination that motivates our citizens to stand ready to defend our liberty against every subversive force, whether it come from within or without. Again, I say, our spacious land is big enough only for the one true ism—Americanism—first, last, and always.

"The maintenance of law and constituted authority is our surest and safest protection against the scheming aggression of the unlawful and godless enemies of the stability of our social order. Let us keep a united front for its preservation."

Well said and well worth pondering by all citizens.

Safe and Sound

THE AMERICAN LINER IROQUOIS with its 584 American refugees and its officers and crew has landed safe and sound in New York harbor, it is good to note. Its arrival with a convoy of American war vessels has ended the suspense over its fate aroused by the tip given the White House last week that it was to be sunk as it neared port. More credence was given the warning by the reports that a submarine of unknown nationality had been sighted in Florida waters.

Either there was no basis for the warning from the German government or the precautionary measures promptly taken served their purpose. In the latter case another mark of credit can be placed in behalf of the convoy system as a foil to submarine activities.

Uncle Sam As Peace Maker

GERMAN HINTS that President Roosevelt would be welcomed as a mediator in the European war place a responsibility on the chief executive. If there is any chance that a truce might lead to a permanent and satisfactory peace, the United States would risk its honor before the bar of history if it rejected flatly the role of intercessor.

But there are a number of drawbacks to casual acceptance of such a task. Unless both Great Britain and France evince the same cordiality toward the proposal, President Roosevelt would be placed in a dubious position if he urged a peace parley. By implication, he would be putting the stamp of approval on what Hitler has done, condoning aggression, and intimating that a dictator can be assured of immunity if he strikes hard enough and suddenly enough.

Although at the moment there seems to be an inclination on both sides to mark time, in the hope that carnage can be averted by some international settlement, it may be assumed that the Allies will never talk peace on the terms Hitler has offered. The exact nature of the terms London and Paris would suggest can only be guessed, but it's a fair bet that they would include freedom for both Poles and Czechs.

The passing of time may change the situation, but for the moment President Roosevelt is justified in keeping silent on the German overture. It would be more appropriate for the Allies to present their minimum demands before any third party offered its services in behalf of a compromise. Both the president and the Senate would be derelict in their duty to this nation and to humanity if they closed the door to the possibility of mediation when and if assurance of an open peace parley is given by both sides.

We are faced with conclusive evidence that Germany and the Allies are fearful of the consequences of a protracted war. Nevertheless, as long as Hitler insists on keeping the spoils of his aggression, and Britain and France refuse to settle on anything less than an end to Nazilism and its unremitting threat to liberty, there is a compiete impasse.

One of the greatest barriers to compromise is the ignorance of the German people themselves. Hitler has elected to keep them from the true nature of the situation. Apparently they are not aware of the real causes of the dispute or of the announced determination of the Allies to destroy the destroyer. Nazi propagandists have made much of Hitler's conquests, but the censors have concealed the fact that he must pay for them. And since they have been told that the Allies are delighted with the peace terms the Fuehrer has offered them, the will to compromise has been discouraged.

This situation must be changed in some measure before an offer of mediation on the part of the United States or any other neutral can have any hope of practical benefit.

Fingerprinting Utility

CHALK UP another credit mark for the utility of fingerprinting. The news columns have just reported a case wherein fingerprints on file in the Veterans' Bureau in Washington led to the identification of a former Cumberland man who was a railroad accident victim near Alden, N. Y.

Fingerprinting came in for disparagement on the part of a good many people who, having associated its use only with the listing of criminals and of crime suspects, felt that its use smacked someway of criminal operations and could not envision its utility in other respects. Yet, as in the case of the former Cumberland man, it can be of valuable service in cases of needed identification.

But the service is useful not only in the detection and prevention of crime, and in civilian aid, but it is also useful in police service. This was pointed out the other day by J. Edgar Hoover, who urged, in addressing the annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs in San Francisco, that it should be used for police officers as well as those in their custody. He said it should be an inviolable rule that every law enforcement officer in America should be fingerprinted before he is given a shield of authority and the prints sent to the FBI in Washington for search against criminal records. Criminals should be brought to justice by honest men, he said, there being no sense in setting a thief to catch a thief, as only men of integrity and decency can shake the complacency of the underworld.

An Effective Law

MARYLANDERS who have worked for a state fireworks regulatory law—and they are in large number—will find interest in a report just issued by the Pennsylvania State Council for the Blind.

A comprehensive survey undertaken by the council throughout the state shows that fireworks caused no deaths last Fourth of July, compared with eight in the preceding year's celebration, and only forty-one injuries, compared with 1,702.

In 1938, Pennsylvania had the unenviable distinction of leading all states in fireworks killings. This year it stands with those that have managed to celebrate the nation's independence without gunpowder fatalities. The casualties of the previous year showed how imperatively needed was state-wide regulation of fireworks use, and the results last Fourth of July show how successful the new law was in its first test.

Apparently the new law has been properly enforced and effectively supported by the public it serves in Pennsylvania. Its record of results in the saving of lives and preventing painful injuries speaks impressively in support of the movement to obtain a similar law in this state.

The smuggling of drugs in New York has fallen off seventy-five per cent—news item. Too much competition, no doubt, by the dope we're getting from Europe.

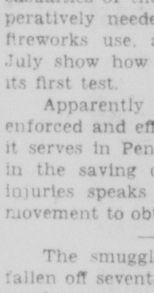

Dentist may run for congress—news item. Well, perhaps he could put some teeth in a few of our laws.

That Cursed Thermometer

By MARSHALL MASLIN

My face is flushed. I feel hot. I don't think I'm well. . . . Perhaps it's something I've eaten. I may be "getting something." I think I'll go to bed early tonight. . . . Now don't make any fuss over me. I'll be all right in the morning. I know I will.

Marshall Maslin

Now, I'm NOT going to see the doctor tomorrow. What do doctors know, anyway? . . . Didn't one of them tell me that all but fifteen percent of his patients would get well anyway without his help? . . . Well, I'm not one of the fifteen percent. I'm going to get well all by myself. . . . See if I don't.

No, no thermometer! . . . I hate the darned things. The devil invented them. . . . Remember that famous doctor who said that thermometers and grandmothers were the worst things around a sick child. . . . Grandmothers fuss tenderly and bother and get upset and upset the patient. And the thermometers tell the ruth and start a sick fellow imagining all sorts of awful possibilities.

So, no thermometer for me. I'm the imaginative, fretful type. You stick a thermometer into my mouth and tell me I've got a temperature of a 100 degrees and pretty soon I'll be convincing myself that I'm getting typhoid fever or spinal meningitis or something like that. . . . I'll get the habit, perhaps. I'll start carrying a thermometer around wherever I go, and whenever I feel a little flushed, I'll stick that gadget in my mouth and take my temperature.

And I'll have to learn how to read one. . . . After twenty-five years I learned how to read a railroad time table and what good has THAT done me? . . . It's too late in life for me to start on thermometers.

I'll got to bed. . . . I'll read a little. . . . I'll turn out the light. . . . And in fifteen minutes by the clock I'll be sound asleep. (But NOT snoring). . . . And in the morning I'll be feeling fine again—and WITHOUT any thermometer!

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Spokesmen for the Toy Manufacturers of the U. S. A., Inc., meeting in New York city, report a lessening demand for war toys, but an increased demand for "national defense equipment." One knows what they mean, and of course the distinction is sound and sensible, but the whole thing would be clearer if they would tell who is doing the demanding. Does the enlightened juvenile write Santa Claus that he wants for Christmas only such weapons as anti-air-craft guns, which obviously cannot be used for offensive war? Or is it the parent who is disparaging militarism, and drawing the line across the hearth rug, with wanton aggression on one side and sound patriotism on the other?

The trouble seems to be that to children war is drama and good dramaturgy necessarily needs protagonists of both good and evil. If you buy the tot a nice fortress and provide no attacking army, he'll probably recruit one from beans or buttons, with or without modern offensive equipment, and the casualty list will probably be up to that of any of the fully equipped battles of Toyland.

Mood of the Country

The toymakers seem to suggest that with Christmas in the offing, it is the spontaneous and untutored demands of the children which are guiding them in their offerings, but it is also indicated that the mood of the country is to keep out of war, and that, presumably, is an adult sentiment. If the "child is father to the man," I should hate to be called on the carpet by a stern six-year-old and be compelled to explain it all.

In 1914, more than half our toys were imported, the bulk of these imports being from Germany. It is sad and confusing to think that the Germans have always been both the great toy-makers and the great war-makers.

During the World War, a friend of mine bootlegged in a Nuremberg doll for his daughter which might have been sculptured by Luca Della Robbia. It was exquisitely quaint and beautiful and one could not believe that the artist who made it could be dragooned into a savage war of conquest. I feel the same way when I saw a revivial of "The Toymaker of Nuremberg" a few years ago. The obvious conclusion is that there is in the German people latent poetry and creativeness which has nothing to do with the power lust of their leaders who have been getting them into trouble all these centuries. That might perhaps do for a Christmas sentiment, at a time when we put aside our planetary disasters and hope for the best.

World Handbook

The Germans have been not only great toymakers, but it was a German who made the most diligent inquiry into the question of the what and why of toys. The book, "Die Spiele Der Thiere" or "The Play of Animals," written by Karl Grosse many years ago, has been the handbook of pedagogs all over the world, translated into many languages.

Herr Grosse finds that play is something more or less than a rehearsal for life. A mother cat, shadow-boxing with her kitten, is merely giving it a gymnasium work-out so that it may bop some other cat when it grows up. He draws no line between the play of animals and children. Kittens or pups take naturally to the mimic warfare which trains them to survive in a world in which there is no benign league of nations or species. And so with children. Their survival instincts train them to get by in just the kind of a world we make ready for them. And before we get to talking about that perhaps it would be just as well to put the children to bed.

Must Have Dreams

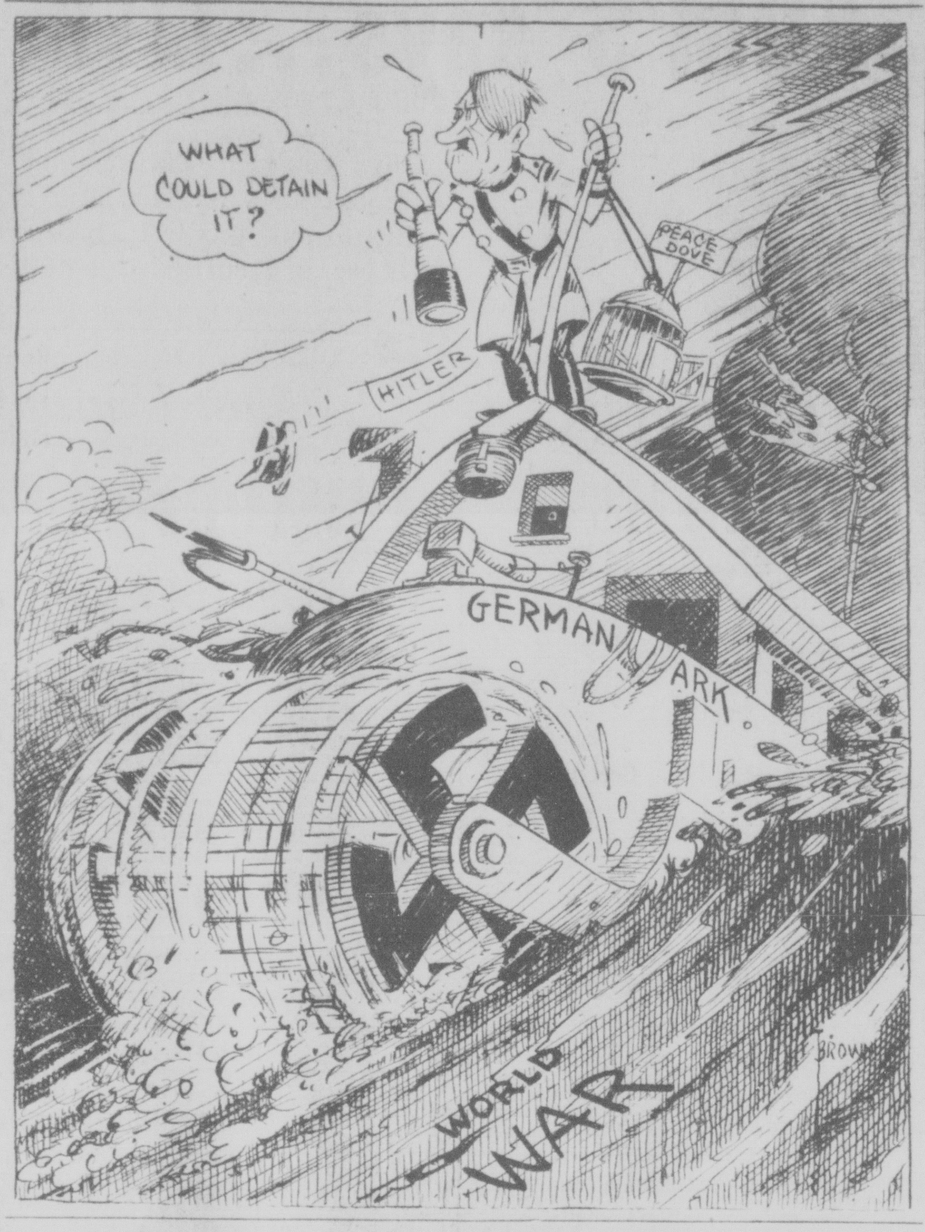

The toymakers this year are emphasizing "purposeful reproducing of American arts, industries, science and homemaking, as well as exact miniatures of all types of transportation." That's fine as far as it goes. But in the adult world we still seek William James's "moral equivalent of war," and in the juvenile world something that might be called the dramatic equivalent of war. The kids just must have drama. Will they set it in steamshovels, electronic laboratores and four-octave electric organs? Perhaps when a real civilization reveals the essential drama and survival value of these marvels. Until then they probably will go for the war toys.—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

GETTING ANXIOUS ABOUT THE DOVE

Suggestions by Admiral Land Prompt Thought about Our Merchant Marine

By MARK SULLIVAN

What Admiral Emory S. Land said to Congress over the radio Tuesday night—he said it in perfectly polite words, as becomes an officer and a gentleman and an Annapolis graduate — but, in the vernacular, what he said amounted to, "Wait a minute, there! Do you realize what you are doing to those ships?"

Mark Sullivan

It was merchant ships the admiral meant, not naval vessels. The admiral, after a fine career in the Navy, is now serving the government in the field of merchant shipping. He is chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, set up in 1936. Its business was and is to restore American merchant shipping to the sea. To that end, the commission has spent hundreds of millions of dollars, building ships, chartering ships and subsidizing operation of ships.

Public Should Understand

Having this responsibility of building up an American merchant marine, Admiral Land was obliged to take notice of what would be the effect of the neutrality bill now in Congress. Because of what Admiral Land said, and what others begin to say; because of the facts underlying what they say, it is necessary for the public to understand what the neutrality bill does about merchant ships.

In war, our merchant ships, like merchant ships of all neutrals, have certain rights under international law. These rights we now propose to waive. The word "waive" is used rather than "give up", for in Senate discussion it is pointed out that we should retain the privilege of sometime re-asserting our rights under international law, if we choose to. But for the present, in order to go great lengths in avoiding evolvement in the war, we propose to waive the rights of our merchant ships.

What we undertake to do about our merchant ships, as provided in the proposed neutrality measure, is to set up great limitations, to put our ships under severe rastrictions and penalties.

First, the proposed measure says, "it shall be unlawful for any American vessel to carry any passengers or any materials to any state" that is at war.

Covers Much Territory

Now when the states at war include Britain and France, they take in much territory. This provision of the neutrality measure would make it unlawful for any American ship to go to any colony or dependency of France or England. It would be unlawful to go to Australia, or to India, or Hongkong, or any French possession in the South Seas; or to Newfoundland, or to Bermuda, or any British or French possession in the West Indies or South or Central America.

It would even be unlawful for an American ship to go by sea to Canada. The bill contains an exception making it all right for an American ship to cross an inland Water, to go from Buffalo or Chicago across the Lakes to Canada. But it would be unlawful for an American ship to go from Boston to Halifax or from Seattle to Vancouver.

"I have said in all cases "unlawful to go." Actually the words of the measure are "unlawful to carry passengers or articles to." This phrasing is probably inadvertent. Few ships would care to go empty.)

Combat Areas

The measure does a second thing, an overlapping thing. It provides that the president in his discretion shall define 'combat areas," and thereafter it shall be unlawful . . . for any American vessel to proceed into or through any such combat area."

Combat areas presumably would be most of the waters of Western Europe—the North Sea, Baltic Sea, the English Channel, the waters west of France, and perhaps Mediterranean waters south of France. The setting up of such combat areas would keep American ships not only away from the nations at war but presumably from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, perhaps from some Mediterranean ports.

These restrictions are imposed upon American ships without regard to the nature of their cargoes —they might be carrying toy balloons or baby rattles. And the penalties for violation are severe—five years in jail, $50,000 fine, or both.

The effects of all this would be to: Drive hundreds of American merchant ships from the sea; turn the business and routes of these ships over to others, the Japanese, or European neutrals—other neutrals who will stand on their rights under international law.

Many Indirect Consequences

It will become difficult for America to get needed raw materials, such as jute from India. The further, indirect consequences would be many. One consequence would be serious impairment of our national defense, for as Admiral Land pointed out, merchant ships are necessary to a strong navy.

Fifteen years ago, it was said that the 1922 conference for the limitation of naval armament at Washington sank more warships than all the battles in history. A current wisecrack says the proposed neutrality bill, if not changed, would sink more merchant vessels than ever were sunk by torpedo or cannon shot. This would not be material if it prevented our involvment in war. But are we sure it will?

Here, plainly, is a thing that few realize; which must be thought about; about which something must be done.

The Profits Of War

From the Cincinnati Enquirer

The Soviet Union is providing for an amazed world the perfect example of how to profit by a war. In the first place you don't enter the war. Belligerents rarely profit from their own wars nowadays, even if they win. In the second place, you flirt with one side and then sell your promise of neutrality to the other side. By this means Russia acquired half of Poland without firing a shot or losing a soldier.

In the third place you promise economic aid to your pseudo ally, which merely means you will sell him at good prices such commodities as you can spare. In the fourth place, you sell other commodities to the other side. Russia is doing all of this. Fifthly, you look about you and find various weak neighbors whom you have hesitated to absorb while your principal enemy was able to defend them.

Following this last principle, Moscow has made "non-aggression treaties" with Estonia and Latvia, is in process of making one with Lithuania, and has "invited" Finland to send over a negotiator. Without risking the loss of a battle, Russia is thus regaining complete dominance over the Baltic Sea, planting naval and air bases around its margins with the "consent" of the small states involved.

This will not be the end of the Soviet Union's "Communist imperialism." A deal with Turkey is still warming over the fire—a deal which may plant Russia firmly astride the Straits. And Rumania may yet feel obliged to buy protection from the Soviets, paying with Bessarabian territory taken from Russia in 1919.

All this is doubly significant because it clarifies the role of the Soviet Union. The picture as it unfolds suggests that Moscow will remain neutral, will continue gaining advantages, and will not be unwilling to do those little things which turn a short war into a long one. War profits are not limited to munitions makers.

On the Record

By Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, Democrat, of South Carolina

What we are doing today is nothing but taking a ride on a merry-go-round. If you do not believe this statement, stop the merry-go-round and you will find that we will be getting off right where we got on. Why? Because you are just simply using the unemployed whom you have put to work, and the farmers whom you are subsidizing, as a transfer facility through which you are distributing tax money for the purpose of paying for what these people have to purchase.

Good Movement But Bad Method

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

HUGH JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 12—What's in a name? A rose by any other name would smell as sweet—but would a fish? I realize that that kind of stuff is cheap. Just the same it is a simple hard truth that a statesman whose first name is Ham and whose second is Fish ought to lean over backward to avoid doing things that are fishy in smell and of the ham type of dramatics.

Congressman Fish, whose leading New York constituent is Franklin Roosevelt, has organized an extra-official committee of congressmen to "keep America out of foreign wars." His secretry, who is on the public payroll, is treasurer of that committee. On his official stationary, he is soliciting funds to support that committee's activity.

Not the Proper Way

This column regards the objective of Mr. Fish's committee as the most important cause now before our public. It agrees that a constant vigilance and dosing with antidote against powerful and poisonous propaganda to get us in are distinctly necessary. But this isn't the way to do it.

Members of Congress are paid by the public to represent majorities in every congressional district and the people as a whole, in the constant debate and strategy for the fixing of laws. But it is no part of the proper duty of any of them to organize partisan political pressure blocks in both the country at large and Congress itself and, in any typical Father Coughlin technique, solicit contributions, large and small, from the public for the plain purpose of propaganda and emotional ballyhoo.

A Rotten Precedent

It is a good cause—keeping out of war—but a rotten precedent. One of the fund soliciting letters said that the purpose is to offset the "New Deal war hysteria campaign." It misrepresented repeal of the arms embargo as giving the "president power to select the aggressor nations—the war making powers of Congress." It suggested that the money asked is "to back up those members who are working in the interest of peace by getting their statements to people in all sections of the country."

Thirty-seven of the members of the "committee" are Republicans and one is a Democrat.

Is Nonpartisan

The question of keeping out of war ought to be a nonpartisan question. The moment it becomes anything different, we lose a lot. Party pressures and party loyalties, if enlisted on the side of getting into war would be very dangerous. Public opinion is so overwhelmingly against getting in that, there is no danger. There is no "war party." The very process of trying to portray the Republicans as the only "peace party"—no matter how phoney—has a distinct tendency to mix the deadly question of peace or war in with all the lesser but still hotly contested issues between the pro-New Dealers and the antis. It has no place there. It is an entirely different question.

Question of Opinion

Do some New Deal policies tend toward war? I think they do but I do not believe that they are so intended. I know of no "war hysteria" New Deal campaign. It is a question of opinion to be debated, not a question of politics for emotional tom-tom beating and such inflamed misleading stuff as this—reeking with the odor of small time politics and departings so far from the established standards of congressional ethics and decorum.

While Mr. Fish is doubtless honestly worried and sincerely eager to serve the cause of peace, this kind of medicine shows snake oil vending, for all the reasons here discussed, is apt to work just the other way.

It degrades and discredits debate and deliberation on some of the most serious problems this country ever faced.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

Maryland Farm Musings

From the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

C. F. Winslow, specialist in forestry for the extension service, says that the state of Maryland imports nine-tenths of the lumber in the state at a cost of $28,000,000 annually. The freight bill alone on this lumber amounts to $4,000,000.

A large representation from the livestock and dairy interests in the state is expected at the dedication program of the new livestock and dairy plant at the University of Maryland, October 21.

"American farmers should not anticipate any large increase in the demand for farm products in the immediate future and should not largely increase their plantings because of conditions in Europe," is the opinion expressed by Dr. T. B. Symons, dean of the college of Agriculture and director of the University of Maryland extension service, who has just returned from England.

Factographs

When an old statue on a poor farmer's land near Prague, Hungary, collapsed during a recent windstorm, gold, silver and copper coins made during the Thirty Years War era (1618-48), were scattered on the ground.

There are seventy-five varieties of fancy mice bred in the United states and England, and additional varieties are being bred and developed to true strains from time to time.

Only One Ism

ADDRESSING the annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs the other day in San Francisco, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, repeated an injunction previously given in a public statement on which comment was made in these columns.

Hoover gave warning that in the wave of patriotism that is rising in this country, there lies a danger from over-zealous groups or individuals engaging in acts that are distinctly un-American in method, no matter how patriotic in aim. Some groups and movements, as heretofore noted, do not even have that aim. His further stress on that warning is well worth noting.

"We need no vigilantes in this situation," Hoover said at San Francisco. "The vigilante method is distinctly contrary to American ideals of justice. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been called upon to investigate all matters relating to espionage, sabotage, and violations of the neutrality regulations. In turn the Federal Bureau of Investigation has requested cooperation of all law enforcement officers in the United States.

"This combined attack by federal and state forces should be sufficient so far as investigation and prosecution are concerned. Beyond the efforts of these law enforcement agencies there is a need, of course, for the individual cooperation of all sincere and earnest Americans. This co-operation should be limited, however, to passing on to the proper officials all questionable facts or rumors which may come one's way. An alert public is the best defense against traitorous or inimical conduct. Let us be realistic and practical, ever alert to the dangers which we know lurk in practically every community in the land, but always calm in our judgment between the real and unreal.

"I have said before and I say again—America has room for only one ism—Americanism. All other isms are inimical to the best interests of our nation. Let no smoke screen descend upon you, blinding your vision from the pitfalls that lie ahead. Let there be no misunderstanding as to the meaning of true Americanism. It is an abiding adherence to our democracy that sprang from the Declaration of Independence and is defined by the Bill of Rights and the Constitution. Loyalty to those principles is Americanism.

"Its ideals are translated in a wholesome respect and obedience to the laws of the land. It is holding high the banners of law and order. Americanism represents liberty. It is respect for all nations without entangling alliances. It is free worship without bigotry. It is truth without distortion of fact. Americanism is love for our time-honored institutions. Americanism is that desire, that willingness, that determination that motivates our citizens to stand ready to defend our liberty against every subversive force, whether it come from within or without. Again, I say, our spacious land is big enough only for the one true ism—Americanism—first, last, and always.

"The maintenance of law and constituted authority is our surest and safest protection against the scheming aggression of the unlawful and godless enemies of the stability of our social order. Let us keep a united front for its preservation."

Well said and well worth pondering by all citizens.

Safe and Sound

THE AMERICAN LINER IROQUOIS with its 534 American refugees and its officers and crew has landed safe and sound in New York harbor, it is good to note. Its arrival with a convoy of American war vessels has ended the suspense over its fate aroused by the tip given the White House last week that it was to be sunk as it neared port. More credence was given the warning by the reports that a submarine of unknown nationality had been sighted in Florida waters.

Either there was no basis for the warning from the German government or the precautionary measures promptly taken served their purpose. In the latter case another mark of credit can be placed in behalf of the convoy system as a foil to submarine activities.

Uncle Sam As Peace Maker

GERMAN HINTS that President Roosevelt would be welcomed as a mediator in the European war place a responsibility on the chief executive. If there is any chance that a truce might lead to a permanent and satisfactory peace, the United States would risk its honor before the bar of history if it rejected flatly the role of intercessor.

But there are a number of drawbacks to casual acceptance of such a task. Unless both Great Britain and France evince the same cordiality toward the proposal, President Roosevelt would be placed in a dubious position if he urged a peace parley. By implication, he would be putting the stamp of approval on what Hitler has done, condoning aggression, and intimating that a dictator can be assured of immunity if he strikes hard enough and suddenly enough.

Although at the moment there seems to be an inclination on both sides to mark time, in the hope that carnage can be averted by some international settlement, it may be assumed that the Allies will never talk peace on the terms Hitler has offered. The exact nature of the terms London and Paris would suggest can only be guessed, but it's a fair bet that they would include freedom for both Poles and Czechs.

The passing of time may change the situation, but for the moment President Roosevelt is justified in keeping silent on the German overture. It would be more appropriate for the Allies to present their minimum demands before any third party offered its services in behalf of a compromise. Both the president and the Senate would be derelict in their duty to this nation and to humanity if they closed the door to the possibility of mediation when and if assurance of an open peace parley is given by both sides.

We are faced with conclusive evidence that Germany and the Allies are fearful of the consequences of a protracted war. Nevertheless, as long as Hitler insists on keeping the spoils of his aggression, and Britain and France refuse to settle on anything less than an end to Naziism and its unremitting threat to liberty, there is a complete impasse.

One of the greatest barriers to compromise is the ignorance of the German people themselves. Hitler has elected to keep them from the true nature of the situation. Apparently they are not aware of the real causes of the dispute or of the announced determination of the Allies to destroy the destroyer. Nazi propagandists have made much of Hitler's conquests, but the censors have concealed the fact that he must pay for them. And since they have been told that the Allies are delighted with the peace terms the Fuehrer has offered them, the will to compromise has been discouraged.

This situation must be changed in some measure before an offer of mediation on the part of the United States or any other neutral can have any hope of practical benefit.

Fingerprinting Utility

CHALK UP another credit mark for the utility of fingerprinting. The news columns have just reported a case wherein fingerprints on file in the Veterans' Bureau in Washington led to the identification of a former Cumberland man who was a railroad accident victim near Alden, N. Y.

Fingerprinting came in for disparagement on the part of a good many people who, having associated its use only with the listing of criminals and of crime suspects, felt that its use smacked someway of criminal operations and could not envision its utility in other respects. Yet, as in the case of the former Cumberland man, it can be of valuable service in cases of needed identification.

But the service is useful not only in the detection and prevention of crime, and in civilian aid, but it is also useful in police service. This was pointed out the other day by J. Edgar Hoover, who urged, in addressing the annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs in San Francisco, that it should be used for police officers as well as those in their custody. He said it should be an inviolable rule that every law enforcement officer in America should be fingerprinted before he is given a shield of authority and the prints sent to the FBI in Washington for search against criminal records. Criminals should be brought to justice by honest men, he said, there being no sense in setting a thief to catch a thief, as only men of integrity and decency can shake the complacency of the underworld.

An Effective Law

MARYLANDERS who have worked for a state fireworks regulatory law—and they are in large number—will find interest in a report just issued by the Pennsylvania State Council for the Blind.

A comprehensive survey undertaken by the council throughout the state shows that fireworks caused no deaths last Fourth of July, compared with eight in the preceding year's celebration, and only forty-one injuries, compared with 1,702.

In 1938, Pennsylvania had the unenviable distinction of leading all states in fireworks killings. This year it stands with those that have managed to celebrate the nation's independence without gunpowder fatalities. The casualties of the previous year showed how imperatively needed was state-wide regulation of fireworks use, and the results last Fourth of July show how successful the new law was in its first test.

Apparently the new law has been properly enforced and effectively supported by the public it serves in Pennsylvania. Its record of results in the saving of lives and preventing painful injuries speaks impressively in support of the movement to obtain a similar law in this state.

The smuggling of drugs in New York has fallen off seventy-five per cent—news item. Too much competition, no doubt, by the dope we're getting from Europe.

Dentist may run for congress—news item. Well, perhaps he could put some teeth in a few of our laws.

That Cursed Thermometer

By MARSHALL MASLIN

My face is flushed. I feel hot. I don't think I'm well. . . . Perhaps it's something I've eaten. I may be "getting something." I think I'll go to bed early tonight. . . . Now don't make any fuss over me. I'll be all right in the morning. I know I will.

Now, I'm NOT going to see the doctor tomorrow. What do doctors know, anyway? . . . Didn't one of them tell me that all but fifteen percent of his patients would get well anyway without his help? . . . Well, I'm not one of the fifteen percent. I'm going to get well all by myself. . . . See if I don't.

No, no thermometer! . . . I hate the darned things. The devil invented them. . . . Remember that famous doctor who said that thermometers and grandmothers were the worst things around a sick child. . . . Grandmothers fuss tenderly and bother and get upset and upset the patient. And the thermometers tell the ruth and start a sick fellow imagining all sorts of awful possibilities.

So, no thermometer for me. I'm the imaginative, fretful type. You stick a thermometer into my mouth and tell me I've got a temperature of a 100 degrees and pretty soon I'll be convincing myself that I'm getting typhoid fever or spinal meningitis or something like that. . . . I'll get the habit, perhaps. I'll start carrying a thermometer around wherever I go, and whenever I feel a little flushed, I'll stick that gadget in my mouth and take my temperature.

And I'll have to learn how to read one. . . . After twenty-five years I learned how to read a railroad time table and what good has THAT done me? . . . It's too late in life for me to start on thermometers.

I'll got to bed. . . . I'll read a little. . . . I'll turn out the light. . . . And in fifteen minutes by the clock I'll be sound asleep. (But NOT snoring). . . . And in the morning I'll be feeling fine again—and WITHOUT any thermometer!

Mark Sullivan

It was merchant ships the admiral meant, not naval vessels. The admiral, after a fine career in the Navy, is now serving the government in the field of merchant shipping. He is chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, set up in 1936. Its business was and is to restore American merchant shipping to the sea. To that end, the commission has spent hundreds of millions of dollars, building ships, chartering ships and subsidizing operation of ships.

Public Should Understand

Having this responsibility of building up an American merchant marine, Admiral Land was obliged to take notice of what would be the effect of the neutrality bill now in Congress. Because of what Admiral Land said, and what others begin to say; because of the facts underlying what they say, it is necessary for the public to understand what the neutrality bill does about merchant ships.

In war, our merchant ships, like merchant ships of all neutrals, have certain rights under international law. These rights we now propose to waive. The word "waive" is used rather than "give up", for in Senate discussion it is pointed out that we should retain the privilege of sometime re-asserting our rights under international law, if we choose to. But for the present, in order to go great lengths in avoiding evolvement in the war, we propose to waive the rights of our merchant ships.

What we undertake to do about our merchant ships, as provided in the proposed neutrality measure, is to set up great limitations, to put our ships under severe rastrictions and penalties.

First, the proposed measure says, "it shall be unlawful for any American vessel to carry any passengers or any materials to any state" that is at war.

Covers Much Territory

Now when the states at war include Britain and France, they take in much territory. This provision of the neutrality measure would make it unlawful for any American ship to go to any colony or dependency of France or England. It would be unlawful to go to Australia, or to India, or Hongkong, or any French possession in the South Seas; or to Newfoundland, or to Bermuda, or any British or French possession in the West Indies or South or Central America.

It would even be unlawful for an American ship to go by sea to Canada. The bill contains an exception making it all right for an American ship to cross an inland Water, to go from Buffalo or Chicago across the Lakes to Canada. But it would be unlawful for an American ship to go from Boston to Halifax or from Seattle to Vancouver.

(I have said in all cases "unlawful to go." Actually the words of the measure are "unlawful to carry passengers or articles to." This phrasing is probably inadvertent. Few ships would care to go empty.)

Combat Areas

The measure does a second thing, an overlapping thing. It provides that the president in his discretion shall define 'combat areas," and thereafter it shall be unlawful . . . for any American vessel to proceed into or through any such combat area."

Combat areas presumably would be most of the waters of Western Europe—the North Sea, Baltic Sea, the English Channel, the waters west of France, and perhaps Mediterranean waters south of France. The setting up of such combat areas would keep American ships not only away from the nations at war but presumably from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, perhaps from some Mediterranean ports.

These restrictions are imposed upon American ships without regard to the nature of their cargoes —they might be carrying toy balloons or baby rattles. And the penalties for violation are severe—five years in jail, $50,000 fine, or both.

The effects of all this would be to: Drive hundreds of American merchant ships from the sea; turn the business and routes of these ships over to others, the Japanese, or European neutrals—other neutrals who will stand on their rights under international law.

Many Indirect Consequences

It will become difficult for America to get needed raw materials, such as jute from India. The further, indirect consequences would be many. One consequence would be serious impairment of our national defense, for as Admiral Land pointed out, merchant ships are necessary to a strong navy.

Fifteen years ago, it was said that the 1922 conference for the limitation of naval armament at Washington sank more warships than all the battles in history. A current wisecrack says the proposed neutrality bill, if not changed, would sink more merchant vessels than ever were sunk by torpedo or cannon shot. This would not be material if it prevented our involvment in war. But are we sure it will?

Here, plainly, is a thing that few realize; which must be thought about; about which something must be done.

The Profits Of War

From the Cincinnati Enquirer

The Soviet Union is providing for an amazed world the perfect example of how to profit by a war. In the first place you don't enter the war. Belligerents rarely profit from their own wars nowadays, even if they win. In the second place, you flirt with one side and then sell your promise of neutrality to the other side. By this means Russia acquired half of Poland without firing a shot or losing a soldier.

In the third place you promise economic aid to your pseudo ally, which merely means you will sell him at good prices such commodities as you can spare. In the fourth place, you sell other commodities to the other side. Russia is doing all of this. Fifthly, you look about you and find various weak neighbors whom you have hesitated to absorb while your principal enemy was able to defend them.

Following this last principle, Moscow has made "non-aggression treaties" with Estonia and Latvia, is in process of making one with Lithuania, and has "invited" Finland to send over a negotiator. Without risking the loss of a battle, Russia is thus regaining complete dominance over the Baltic Sea, planting naval and air bases around its margins with the "consent" of the small states involved.

This will not be the end of the Soviet Union's "Communist imperialism." A deal with Turkey is still warming over the fire—a deal which may plant Russia firmly astride the Straits. And Rumania may yet feel obliged to buy protection from the Soviets, paying with Bessarabian territory taken from Russia in 1919.

All this is doubly significant because it clarifies the role of the Soviet Union. The picture as it unfolds suggests that Moscow will remain neutral, will continue gaining advantages, and will not be unwilling to do those little things which turn a short war into a long one. War profits are not limited to munitions makers.

On the Record

By Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, Democrat, of South Carolina

What we are doing today is nothing but taking a ride on a merry-go-round. If you do not believe this statement, stop the merry-go-round and you will find that we will be getting off right where we got on. Why? Because you are just simply using the unemployed whom you have put to work, and the farmers whom you are subsidizing, as a transfer facility through which you are distributing tax money for the purpose of paying for what these people have to purchase.

Good Movement But Bad Method

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 12—What's in a name? A rose by any other name would smell as sweet—but would a fish? I realize that that kind of stuff is cheap. Just the same it is a simple hard truth that a statesman whose first name is Ham and whose second is Fish ought to lean over backward to avoid doing things that are fishy in smell and of the ham type of dramatics.

HUGH JOHNSON

Congressman Fish, whose leading New York constituent is Franklin Roosevelt, has organized an extra-official committee of congressmen to "keep America out of foreign wars." His secretry, who is on the public payroll, is treasurer of that committee. On his official stationary, he is soliciting funds to support that committee's activity.

Not the Proper Way

This column regards the objective of Mr. Fish's committee as the most important cause now before our public. It agrees that a constant vigilance and dosing with antidote against powerful and poisonous propaganda to get us in are distinctly necessary. But this isn't the way to do it.

Members of Congress are paid by the public to represent majorities in every congressional district and the people as a whole, in the constant debate and strategy for the fixing of laws. But it is no part of the proper duty of any of them to organize partisan political pressure blocks in both the country at large and Congress itself and, in any typical Father Coughlin technique, solicit contributions, large and small, from the public for the plain purpose of propaganda and emotional ballyhoo.

A Rotten Precedent

It is a good cause—keeping out of war—but a rotten precedent. One of the fund soliciting letters said that the purpose is to offset the "New Deal war hysteria campaign." It misrepresented repeal of the arms embargo as giving the "president power to select the aggressor nations—the war making powers of Congress." It suggested that the money asked is "to back up those members who are working in the interest of peace by getting their statements to people in all sections of the country."

Thirty-seven of the members of the "committee" are Republicans and one is a Democrat.

Is Nonpartisan

The question of keeping out of war ought to be a nonpartisan question. The moment it becomes anything different, we lose a lot. Party pressures and party loyalties, if enlisted on the side of getting into war would be very dangerous. Public opinion is so overwhelmingly against getting in that, there is no danger. There is no "war party." The very process of trying to portray the Republicans as the only "peace party"—no matter how phoney—has a distinct tendency to mix the deadly question of peace or war in with all the lesser but still hotly contested issues between the pro-New Dealers and the antis. It has no place there. It is an entirely different question.

Question of Opinion

Do some New Deal policies tend toward war? I think they do but I do not believe that they are so intended. I know of no "war hysteria" New Deal campaign. It is a question of opinion to be debated, not a question of politics for emotional tom-tom beating and such inflamed misleading stuff as this—reeking with the odor of small time politics and departings so far from the established standards of congressional ethics and decorum.

While Mr. Fish is doubtless honestly worried and sincerely eager to serve the cause of peace, this kind of medicine shows snake oil vending, for all the reasons here discussed, is apt to work just the other way.

It degrades and discredits debate and deliberation on some of the most serious problems this country ever faced.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc.

Maryland Farm Musings

From the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

C. F. Winslow, specialist in forestry for the extension service, says that the state of Maryland imports nine-tenths of the lumber in the state at a cost of $28,000,000 annually. The freight bill alone on this lumber amounts to $4,000,000.

A large representation from the livestock and dairy interests in the state is expected at the dedication program of the new livestock and dairy plant at the University of Maryland, October 21.

"American farmers should not anticipate any large increase in the demand for farm products in the immediate future and should not largely increase their plantings because of conditions in Europe," is the opinion expressed by Dr. T. B. Symons, dean of the college of Agriculture and director of the University of Maryland extension service, who has just returned from England.

Factographs

When an old statue on a poor farmer's land near Prague, Hungary, collapsed during a recent windstorm, gold, silver and copper coins made during the Thirty Years War era (1618-48), were scattered on the ground.

There are seventy-five varieties of fancy mice bred in the United states and England, and additional varieties are being bred and developed to true strains from time to time.

Musical Talent And Baldness Are Inheritable

Some Diseases Are Also Transmitted to Progeny

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Discussing further the book called "You and Heredity," by Amram Scheinfeld and Dr. Morton D. Schweitzer (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York), there is a special element called the X chromosome, which enters into the development of any animal, including the human animal. The female adds two of these X chromosomes, the male only one.

There is another peculiar chromosome called the Y, which is present only in the male element. The Y is much smaller than the X, and in some diseases the male X chromosome carries diseases which are called, for this reason, sex-linked. These liseases occur almost exclusively in men because in women the extra X chromosome blocks the other one. The Y chromosome is much shorter and does not block the X chromosome which carries the disease.

Color Blindness, Too

One of these diseases is color blindness; another is the bleeding sickness which carried off the young czar, prince of Russia, and the son of the king of Spain.

Baldness is a sex-linked, inherited characteristic, occurring exclusively in man. Complete baldness in women is almost never seen.

There are three special forms of inherited baldness patterns: (1) The kind which is over the whole top of the head; if a man of this kind happens to inherit it from both sides of the family, all of his sons will be bald. (2) The baldness starting at the temples and moving backwards in two bays over the ears; it is less likely to be hereditary. (3) The baldness starting at the center of the crown; this is an inherited baldness pattern, but it may not be so likely to produce baldness in the children.

Musical talent is particularly likely to be inherited.

Talent Shows Early

Among thirty-six outstanding instrumental musicians of the world, the average age at which talent was expressed was under five. Their professional debuts were made at the average age of 13. Among their families, half the mothers were reported as having unusual musical talent, and three-quarters of the fathers were musical or professional musicians; several, such as the father of Damrosch, were of outstanding musical talent. Half the brothers and sisters had musical talent and were concert artists of note.

Of thirty-six Metropolitan Opera singers, the average age at which training was begun was eight. The age of the professional debut is somewhat later in these than in the instrumentalists on account of the vocal changes that occur at puberty; it was 15 1-2 for the women and 17 1-2 for the men.

As in the case of the instrumentalists, a large number of mothers and fathers of the opera singers were decidedly talented in music, many of them professionally.

Book Aids Are Helpful in the Tot's Education

Parents Are Advised to Give Attention to This Factor

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

As a rule, it is easier to get the public to pay for luxurious school buildings than to pay adequate salaries to teachers and supply sufficient books and other learning and teaching equipment.

Yet, in places, great progress has been made in providing good school libraries, even free supplementary books in the classroom. Through these means, children whose parents cannot provide such school helps at home are given an educational opportunity equal to that afforded children from the well-to-do homes.

Unfortunately, relatively few local school communities provide free suplementary school books and helps required by the rapidly changing methods of teaching.

Should Face Facts

We parents might as well face some of these facts and do the best we can about them. In the meanwhile, the school would do well to require of the rank and file of children the use only of such materials as are made available at the school.

But since not nearly all schools do, many parents in most school districts, and most parents in some school districts, easily could afford to buy supplementary materials for the home. Perhaps they could afford to provide one or several reference sets, such as a children's encyclopedia, a set of good literature, an unabridged dictionary and a magazine suited to the child's age.

Even though the school assignments might draw but rarely on such home helps, the family conversation will often occasion the use of these helps. Children also like to browse, and with profit, neighbor children often joining them.

A Budget Matter

In many a home it is merely a matter of rearranging the budget to do these things. When parents are really concerned about the best education of their children, they will spend less on luxury and more on the essentials. Think of the money squandered by parents on cocktail parties, visits to night clubs and the like, money which could be turned so much more profitably to materials for education and culture in the home. But then, it is their business, after all.

One more word: Thousands of parents might, if they really cared, train themselves and their children in the use of the very best educational helps by taking advantage of the opportunities offered by the free public library.

Boom Is in Making For Rich Huff Coal Field in West Virginia

Logan, W. Va., Oct. 12 (AP)—Brisk talk of another coal boom and of the further development of the rich Huff creek section is heard on almost every corner in this mining town

The Huff creek field, engineers say, is virtually untapped because of the lack of facilities to move the coal. But now the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad has applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to extend a branch line up through Huff's creek and on over into Wyoming county. Several large coal companies already have much of the land under lease.

Geologists and engineers knew early in the eighteenth century that much of Logan county was studded with rich coal veins but it was not until 1904—when the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad began extending its lines up to the mines—that production skyrocketed. In 1905 the county produced 272,080 tons. That output increased tremendously under the stimulus of the World war demand and the resultant industrial spurt until in 1927, the peak year, the county mined 21,803,810 tons.

Production began dropping after that boom year. In 1938, the output totaled 10,776,410 tons—less than it was twenty years before—and many of the mines shut down.

A housemoving company finally had to be summoned with its heavy equipment before the truck could be righted. Tucker said he particularly wanted to thank the police and fire departments and volunteer and other mechanics who aided the moving company in righting the truck.

THE CHARM OF THE GAME

MUCH OF THE joy in bridge comes from its uncertainty. No matter how ably you and your partner may perform, in bidding or play, the fate of a lot of hands will depend upon factors which are completely beyond your control. Many a soundly bid contract would be beaten if your opponents swapped hands, and many an unsound one would be made if the same thing were done.

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

This deal got bid to either 6-No Trumps or 7-No Trumps at all tables of a duplicate game. Some declarers took all the tricks and others lost one trick. It resulted in a whole series of post-mortems, which finally brought out the fact that during one of them the East-West hands got switched. When the club K was in the East a grand slam was easy, and when it was not it was impossible.

Many kinds of bidding occurred on it, one of the most popular sequences being: North 1-Spade, South 3-Clubs, North 3-No Trumps, South 4-No Trumps (Blackwood), North 5-Hearts, South 5-No Trumps, North 6-Diamonds and South 7-No Trumps.

Shadow Over Hill House

By ELLIOTT FILLION

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

Mrs. Peake, proprietor of Hill House, New England summer resort, is found murdered by the "spite fence" erected near her property by her estranged sister, Miss Ivy Newcomb. Previous to the murder the guests had been concerned about the poisoning of one of their number, Mrs. Rutherford, who recovers; strange sounds of a prowler on the rooms. Those at Hill House besides Dr. Neal and Josie Peake, children of the dead woman, are Sally Gordon, spending her first vacation there; her close friends, Rhoda and her fiance Duncan; Dr. Paul and Pauline Rutherford, children of Mrs. Rutherford; Coral Easton, Bruce Orton and Joseph Barry. Josie is friendly with Alan Murray, who lives at Miss Ivy's, and that infuriates her brother, Neal. He likes Coral Easton, for whom Josie has no use. The police begin their investigation. The police chief enlists the aid of Miss Gordon, then introduces Captain Lancy, well-known detective, who has been called in to take charge of the case.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

CLEAR IN my mind was a picture I had seen of Captain Lancy. It was frequently seen, for he was the idol of the newspapers. Young, fine looking, highly educated, wealthy, he had gone into detective work because he liked it and believed in its ideals. Not yet had he failed to solve a case laid in his hands. Such success was almost unbelievable. Some individuals attributed it all to Lady Luck, but whatever the reason the newspapers kept his name before the public in a continual panegyric.

Of the man, himself, and his methods I had read much. Now as I looked at him, I was forced to agree that those who raved over his personal appearance were not wrong. He was tall, deceptively slender in physique, with immobile features, iron gray hair, holding a slight wave, and steel gray eyes. I had read and heard so much about him that I couldn't remember half. But one thing I knew I would never forget.

Whenever Captain Lancy's pictured face appeared in a paper, under it was sure to be the caption "The Man and His Creed." And it was the words of his creed which I could never forget. "The innocent must be protected, the guilty must be punished." This was the man who now surveyed us all in a questioning silence.

"There is no need of my going into a detailed speech," he said gravely. "You all know why we are gathered here. I wantea ch one of you to tell me where and when you saw Mrs. Peake after dinner last night."

No one spoke. He looked from one to the other with piercing gaze. "Surely someone must have seen her at some time," he said. A note of impatience was in his voice. "Please speak up."

"I saw her." It was Rhoda's voice, weak and trembling, which answered.

"Yes?" Captain Lancy smiled encouragingly at her. "Where and at what time did you see her?"

"Right here, Duncan Abbott and Sally Gordon were with me, but they were back to her, they didn't see her. It must have been about ten minutes of nine. She came either from the stairway or from the door at the back, I didn't notice which, and went out the terrace door."

"And how do you know it was ten minutes of nine? Did you look at the clock?"

"No, I didn't, Rhoda confessed, "but in about ten minutes Josie came in. She said it was 9 o'clock. That is what makes me say I saw Mrs. Peake at about ten minutes to nine."

"Very good. Do you others corroborate her story?"

Dunc, Josie and I nodded, and Josie said: "I was hunting for mother then."

"And how long was it before you found her?"

We looked from one to the other. In that confused period, who stopped to think of time, I thought rebelliously. But Dr. Paul's smooth voice answered:

"I looked at my watch after Miss Gordon left me to come back to the house. It was exactly 10 o'clock. I think it was about five minutes earlier that we found her. I have told you how everything was slowed up by the fog."

"Right." Lancy spoke crisply. "It was seven minutes past ten when your call came through. Did anyone else see Mrs. Peake after dinner?"

No one spoke. Remembering what Chloe had told me, I looked at Coral Easton. She was twisting her handkerchief into a rag, but her face was noncommittal and bland.

My blood boiled. Why didn't she speak out? She couldn't have forgotten something which took place such a short time ago. A vague suspicion that Coral Easton was in some unexplainable way connected with the mysterious happenings of Hill House sprang to life in my brain.

Yet I couldn't believe she had killed Mrs. Peake. No girl who cared for a man would bring trouble and anguish upon him by killing his mother. But—did she love Neal? I didn't believe she did, so that was washed out. Yet what would she gain by killing Mrs. Peake, and could she have done such a deed and sit there as nonchalantly as she was doing?

Her maudlin pleas to leave Hill House I believed to be just a form of exhibitionism. I had sized her up as a person who would take any means to make herself the center of any gathering. But, with all my dislike and criticism of her, I still couldn't believe she was a murderer.

I drew a long sigh of relief. Thank heaven, the solving of the mystery lay in brighter brains and cleverer hands than mine. Captain Lancy was speaking again.

"Do any of you know anything, or have any idea, which you think may help us solve tonight's tragedy?"

"I have some knowledge which may be of use to you," Dr. Paul said gravely. "But I would prefer to speak with you alone."

The detective keenly eyed him. "Very well. I'll see you later. Has anyone else anything to say?"

Neal raised his ravaged face.

"Captain Lancy." His voice shook. "I shall always believe that the death of my mother had something to do with—the spite fence."

"The spike fence!" The detective repeated the words in a bewildered tone.

"Not spike, spite," Neal repeated. Then as Captain Lancy's face still bore a puzzled air, he spelled the word aloud. "S-p-i-t-e, spite."

"A SPITE fence." The other uttered the word as though fumbling for the meaning which lay behind it. "Do you mean that that tall wooden fence was built for SPITE?" In his interest Lancy was leaning forward, his alert gray eyes fixed on Neal's face.

"I do."

A prolonged "hu-um" issued from the detective's lips. "I'll confess that's a new one on me," he admitted. "I've read of spite fences, but I never came across one before. I didn't know they existed in this age."

"That one is about ten years old, Neal said, with a wry grimace. "It was built by my mother's sister, who lives in the cottage on the other side. It is a long story and, like Paul, I prefer to tell it in private."

Captain Lancy nodded understandingly and conferred in an undertone with Chief Forrest. When he turned back to us, his face wore a still graver expression.

"Is your information connected with the spite fence, Dr. Rutherford?" he asked.

His question seemed to surprise Dr. Paul. "Not at all," he said decidedly. "I know nothing about that."

"And you, Dr. Peake, have you any absolutely knowledge that your mother's death is due to the spite fence?"

"No, I can't say that I have any definite knowledge," returned Neal. "You will have to hear what I have to say to understand why I fe as I do."

"Then," the detective went on, "I think we should be sure that no one here can give us any information before we separate for the night. I wish an explanation of each one of you as to exactly why you are here at this particular time.

"Dr. Rutherford, I understand your mother and sister are here with you. What is your reason for being here?"

"Dr. Peake and I have been close friends for years. This is the second summer we have spent our vacation here."

"Your name, please, and reason?" Captain Lancy pointed to Bruce Orton, who hesitated and turned red over his explanation, though he gave his name readily enough.

"I met Miss Peake last winter," he finally blurted out. "So came here for my vacation."

Lancy nodded: "And you?"

"Coral Easton." Her voice was altogether too chipper for anyone who such a short time ago was making such a hullabaloo.

"I am engaged to Dr. Peake." She smirked until I wanted to slap her. "I am spending the summer here."

A gasp of surprise came from Joseph Barry, and there was fury in the glance he turned upon her, while a strangled moan came from Pauline Rutherford's white lips.

Captain Lancy looked from one to the other. I believe he sized up the situation as completely as though he had known the persons before him for months.

"And you?"

"Joseph Barry." His brows were drawn together in an angry frown. "I am an old friend of Miss Easton's. Naturally, when she came here, I came, too."

"Even though you didn't know of her engagement?" asked Lancy suavely.

Before Barry could answer, a sharp rapping was heard on the front door. A police officer, at a nod from Captain Lancy, sprang to open it.

Against the background of the fog stood two figures—Miss Ivy Newcomb and Alan Murray.

Latest Means of Speeding Up Deliveries Is Demonstrated

Washington, Oct. 12 (AP) — Postmasters from all parts of the nation witnessed today a demonstration of the latest means of speeding up the mails—non stop pick up and delivery service by airplane.

Standing in huge crowds about a roped off area on the Mall just across from the new national art gallery, they saw a sped plane roar cut of the sky and swoop downward.

Heading toward them at ninety miles an hour, the plane lowered a hook like device to which was attached a mail pouch.

The device coupled with wires swung between two masts erected on the mall. It left behind the loaded mail pouch and picked up another.

Several times the plane went through what to the pilot is regular routine—he was one of the fliers on the regular non stop pick up service operating on an experimental basis in Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia.

With the postmasters were a number of members of Congress who earlier had heard Representative Randolph (D-WVA) praise the pick up service on th floor of the House as a means of taking airmails into small towns which do not have landing fields.

Randolph Praises Service

"It's the thing that will take the air mail service right to the front door of the smallest community and serve those that are without airports," he said. "I feel sure that the postoffice will not only recommend continuance of the experimental service, but will ask Congress to appropriate funds to expand it and it will not be many years until hundreds of cities are being served.

Randolph praised Dr. L. S. Adams, of Morgantown, W. Va., who developed the device, and to Richard C. Dupont, president of all American aviation, Inc., which holds the contract for the experimental service now operating in 58 towns.

Bremen Cook

ship while I'm alive. I would rather sink the Bremen."

Without slackening speed, the ship received a complete coat of dull gray paint. She refused to answer wireless calls and at night she ran without lights.

"The first morning out," said the cook, "everybody who had nothing urgent to do, including butchers, Stewards and cooks, plus a few sailors, all got pots of gray paint. Lifeboats were swung out and the men applied the paint to the sides of the ship, wilding paint burshes with long handles.

"Paint or Drown"

"In no time the Bremen was not the Bremen any more. You may have heard 'pump or drown,' but we had to 'paint or drown.' "

Post brought home some photographs of this work, including one in which he alone was not giving the Nazi salute.

When the job was done, he said, "in the mist at 200 meters (656 feet) you could not have seen the Bremen."

"Among the members of the crew there came a terrible tension," recalled Post, "as nobody knew where we were going.

"Later, in the day of Sept. 3, we were all called together in a large saloon. The captain, standing in the center, said: 'men, war in Europe has started.' "

After he told of plans to sink the ship should capture seem sure, "everybody gave the Nazi salute except myself, the only Hollander on board. For, to be frank, the prospect of disappearing below the surface for good didn't attract me very much."

Every Precaution Taken

Every precaution for crew safety was taken ,however, the men abandoning their usual quarters in the forecastle for fear of collision, post related. Regular lifeboat drills were held.

After a few days in the murky weather, Post said, "from the icy cold we concluded we were far up north, which proved to be the case afterward.

"We were again called together by the captain, who told us that between England and Iceland there was a watch of English ships every ten miles."

"All day we were listening for alarm signals which were set up everywhere in the ship."

Every man selected a few personal possessions to take with him in his lifeboat.

"Under these circumstances we got very little sleep," the cook related. "We did not undress, as at any moment we might come across a trawler or some other vessel which might seize us. Numb with cold, sailors were on the lookout in the crow's nest or on the foreship.

"At last we learned we were somewhere between Iceland and Spitzenbergen. In the morning of Sept. 6, three days after the outbreak of war, we sighted the coast of Murmansk.

Met By Russian Cruiser

"As we came near the shore, we saw a man-o'war which afterward appeared to be a Russian cruiser. Outside Murmansk we got a Russian pilot officer.

"I suppose the Bremen had never entered port under such conditions. At the foremast there was only the flag of the company (North German Lloyd) and the Russian hammer and sickle, and behind that the Swastika flag."

The men were not allowed to go ashore, Post said but added he did not mind.

"A load fell from my chest when we on the Bremen saw the coast of Murmansk appear out of the mist," he said.

"The old man (Capt. Aherns) brought us through, and no matter what you might say about a Nazi captain, he, together with all these clever boys, outwitted the British navy."

(The Frankfurther Zeitung reported Oct. 5 that Captain Ahrens had been promoted to commodore for his feat).

In Murmansk, the crew was en- and at moving picture shows aboard.

"After we had seen our films, we tertained by the ship's orchestra borrowed others from other German ships," said the cook. "For every day more German freight and passenger ships entered port.

"Everybody had to deliver his papers to the captain, also his part of $2,000 which had been divided among the crew during the journey back."

Letter writing was forbidden, and only German radio programs were permitted, Post said.

Finally, after the German learned they were to be sent to Germany.

Post said they left Murmansk Sept. 18 ,reaching Leningrad three days later by rail, the unusually long time being caused by Soviet troop movements. From Leningrad, German ships took the men to Kiel, through the Kiel canal and to their home port of Bremerhaven.

Captain of Fishing Boat Sees Planes and Warships in Battle

AUXILIARY GENERAL

Gen. Fanni Luukkonen

General Fanni Luukkonen has under her command the Finnish women's territorial auxiliary—the Lotta Svard. The women have enrolled for non-combatant duties in the event the Russian Bear decides Filand would be a tender morsel for her to devour.

Alesund, Norway, Oct. 12 (AP)—The skipper of a Norwegian fishing boat came into port today with a hair-raising story of having ridden out a major engagement Monday between British warships and German bombing planes in the North Sea.

For an hour and a half the captain said his sturdy little boat, the Kvaloy, was caught in the thundering battle participated in by five British ships and about 150 German planes.

So far as he and his crew could see, neither ships nor planes scored hits. The captain related, however, that after the warships steamed away there was a terrific explosion and a column of fire spurted skyward.

(The German admiralty reported its planes scored ten direct hits in a North Sea battle Monday; the British admiralty agreed there had been a battle but said the German bombs fell hundreds of yards away from the warshipst and that there was no damage or casutities.)

The fishing boat captain said he was going quietly about his nets off the Viking bank when the warplanes roared out of the west and the ships appeared on the horizon from the east.

As the warships approacher close to his boat—much too close, in fact—the planes, began raining bombs and the ship's' pom pom guns began chattering their reply.

The Kvaloy, bobbing on the water like a cork from the heavy seas kicked up by the exploding projectiles, attempted to steer to the west but the warships did likewise.

Finally, the captain said, the warships which had followed a zig-zag course at full speed during the battle withdrew and the bombers roared away.

Germany Refuses To Relay Broadcast Of Finnish Speech

Helsinki, Oct. 13 (Friday) (AP)—Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko early today reaffirmed to his Scandinavian neighbors Finland's "will to peace" in a radio broadcast which Germany refused to relay to the United States on the ground of its "political nature."

Russia, with whom Finland opened negotiations today in Moscow, was not mentioned by name in the five-minute address in which Erkko praised the United States as a "great and free nation inspired by a sense of justice, protection and defense of democratic principles."

The cancellation of the relay of the broadcast to the United States was announced two hours before Erkko was to go on the air.

CIO Demands Voice In the Fixing of Production Speeds

Automobile Workers Make New Demands of Chrysler Corporation

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (AP)—The 1940 political course of the CIO was set today by the union's second annual international convention, but no reference was made to a possible third term for President Roosevelt.

Although scores of CIO unions, councils and state conventions had urged a third term for Mr. Roosevelt, convention leaders sidetracked any blanket reference to the New Deal.

As to President Roosevelt's recent request that both the CIO and AFL resume negotiations through which "labor peace" might be achieved, the convention dismissed the question with a terse resolution which recommended that an existing negotiating committee "be continued and authorized to exercise its discretion in any future negotiations" with AFL.

With reference to the part the Congress of Industrial Organizations will play in politics, the delegates approved unanimously a resolution placing the trust of the unions in Labor's Non-partican League. This league was commended for support of candidates committed to "a program of social and labor legislation." The resolution urged that "in view of the importance to labor of the x x x 1940 national election, the executive board take appropriate action to coordinate the political and legislative activities of each of its affiliates and to establish cooperation with progressive croups in support of a constructive program x x x."

The convention elects officers tomorrow and closes Saturday.

The United States department of labor criticized in one resolution as having failed to make itself "the vigorous champion of the wage earners," while having "assumed the role of adjuster and compromiser in controvention of its original purposes." Most of the speakers on this resolution were specific in exempting Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins from "undue blame."

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of United Mine Workers, declared "we are serving notice x x x that the time has arrived when labor must take its place in this setup so the labor department can function in the interest of labor as it was intended to do."

Representation of labor on the government board of the American Red Cross was urged in another resolution. President John L. Lewis contended the Red Cross was controlled "by those who set themselves up as the American aristocracy," and that the organization should be "democratized."

The 385 delegates amended the CIO constitution to increase the number of vice presidents from two to six. Officers now will consist of the president, six vice presidents and a secretary. The constitution also was amended to give the CIO its first paid officer by providing a salary (yet to be determined) for the secretary.

Heading toward them at ninety miles an hour, the plane lowered a hook like device to which was attached a mail pouch.

The device coupled with wires swung between two masts erected on the mall. It left behind the loaded mail pouch and picked up another.

Several times the plane went through what to the pilot is regular routine—he was one of the fliers on the regular non stop pick up service operating on an experimental basis in Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia.

With the postmasters were a number of members of Congress who earlier had heard Representative Randolph (D-WVA) praise the pick up service on th floor of the House as a means of taking airmails into small towns which do not have landing fields.

Randolph Praises Service

"It's the thing that will take the air mail service right to the front door of the smallest community and serve those that are without airports," he said. "I feel sure that the postoffice will not only recommend continuance of the experimental service, but will ask Congress to appropriate funds to expand it and it will not be many years until hundreds of cities are being served.

Randolph praised Dr. L. S. Adams, of Morgantown, W. Va., who developed the device, and to Richard C. Dupont, president of all American aviation, Inc., which holds the contract for the experimental service now operating in 58 towns.

Bremen Cook

ship while I'm alive. I would rather sink the Bremen."

Without slackening speed, the ship received a complete coat of dull gray paint. She refused to answer wireless calls and at night she ran without lights.

"The first morning out," said the cook, "everybody who had nothing urgent to do, including butchers, Stewards and cooks, plus a few sailors, all got pots of gray paint. Lifeboats were swung out and the men applied the paint to the sides of the ship, wilding paint burshes with long handles.

"Paint or Drown"

"In no time the Bremen was not the Bremen any more. You may have heard 'pump or drown,' but we had to 'paint or drown.' "

Post brought home some photographs of this work, including one in which he alone was not giving the Nazi salute.

When the job was done, he said, "in the mist at 200 meters (656 feet) you could not have seen the Bremen."

"Among the members of the crew there came a terrible tension," recalled Post, "as nobody knew where we were going.

"Later, in the day of Sept. 3, we were all called together in a large saloon. The captain, standing in the center, said: 'men, war in Europe has started.' "

After he told of plans to sink the ship should capture seem sure, "everybody gave the Nazi salute except myself, the only Hollander on board. For, to be frank, the prospect of disappearing below the surface for good didn't attract me very much."

Every Precaution Taken

Every precaution for crew safety was taken ,however, the men abandoning their usual quarters in the forecastle for fear of collision, post related. Regular lifeboat drills were held.

After a few days in the murky weather, Post said, "from the icy cold we concluded we were far up north, which proved to be the case afterward.

"We were again called together by the captain, who told us that between England and Iceland there was a watch of English ships every ten miles."

"All day we were listening for alarm signals which were set up everywhere in the ship."

Every man selected a few personal possessions to take with him in his lifeboat.

"Under these circumstances we got very little sleep," the cook related. "We did not undress, as at any moment we might come across a trawler or some other vessel which might seize us. Numb with cold, sailors were on the lookout in the crow's nest or on the foreship.

"At last we learned we were somewhere between Iceland and Spitzenbergen. In the morning of Sept. 6, three days after the outbreak of war, we sighted the coast of Murmansk.

Met By Russian Cruiser

"As we came near the shore, we saw a man-o'war which afterward appeared to be a Russian cruiser. Outside Murmansk we got a Russian pilot officer.

"I suppose the Bremen had never entered port under such conditions. At the foremast there was only the flag of the company (North German Lloyd) and the Russian hammer and sickle, and behind that the Swastika flag."

The men were not allowed to go ashore, Post said but added he did not mind.

"A load fell from my chest when we on the Bremen saw the coast of Murmansk appear out of the mist," he said.

"The old man (Capt. Ahrens) brought us through, and no matter what you might say about a Nazi captain, he, together with all these clever boys, outwitted the British navy."

(The Frankfurther Zeitung reported Oct. 5 that Captain Ahrens had been promoted to commodore for his feat).

In Murmansk, the crew was entertained by the ship's orchestra and at moving picture shows aboard.

"After we had seen our films, we borrowed others from other German ships," said the cook. "For every day more German freight and passenger ships entered port.

"Everybody had to deliver his papers to the captain, also his part of $2,000 which had been divided among the crew during the journey back."

Letter writing was forbidden, and only German radio programs were permitted, Post said.

Finally, after the German learned they were to be sent to Germany.

Post said they left Murmansk Sept. 18 ,reaching Leningrad three days later by rail, the unusually long time being caused by Soviet troop movements. From Leningrad, German ships took the men to Kiel, through the Kiel canal and to their home port of Bremerhaven.

Captain of Fishing Boat Sees Planes and Warships in Battle

AUXILIARY GENERAL

Gen. Fanni Luukkonen

General Fanni Luukkonen has under her command the Finnish women's territorial auxiliary—the Lotta Svard. The women have enrolled for non-combatant duties in the event the Russian Bear decides Filand would be a tender morsel for her to devour.

Alesund, Norway, Oct. 12 (AP)—The skipper of a Norwegian fishing boat came into port today with a hair-raising story of having ridden out a major engagement Monday between British warships and German bombing planes in the North Sea.

For an hour and a half the captain said his sturdy little boat, the Kvaloy, was caught in the thundering battle participated in by five British ships and about 150 German planes.

So far as he and his crew could see, neither ships nor planes scored hits. The captain related, however, that after the warships steamed away there was a terrific explosion and a column of fire spurted skyward.

(The German admiralty reported its planes scored ten direct hits in a North Sea battle Monday; the British admiralty agreed there had been a battle but said the German bombs fell hundreds of yards away from the warshipst and that there was no damage or casutities.)

The fishing boat captain said he was going quietly about his nets off the Viking bank when the warplanes roared out of the west and the ships appeared on the horizon from the east.

As the warships approacher close to his boat—much too close, in fact—the planes, began raining bombs and the ship's' pom pom guns began chattering their reply.

The Kvaloy, bobbing on the water like a cork from the heavy seas kicked up by the exploding projectiles, attempted to steer to the west but the warships did likewise.

Finally, the captain said, the warships which had followed a zig-zag course at full speed during the battle withdrew and the bombers roared away.

Germany Refuses To Relay Broadcast Of Finnish Speech

Helsinki, Oct. 13 (Friday) (AP)—Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko early today reaffirmed to his Scandinavian neighbors Finland's "will to peace" in a radio broadcast which Germany refused to relay to the United States on the ground of its "political nature."

Russia, with whom Finland opened negotiations today in Moscow, was not mentioned by name in the five-minute address in which Erkko praised the United States as a "great and free nation inspired by a sense of justice, protection and defense of democratic principles."

The cancellation of the relay of the broadcast to the United States was announced two hours before Erkko was to go on the air.

Automobile Workers Make New Demands of Chrysler Corporation

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (AP)—The 1940 political course of the CIO was set today by the union's second annual international convention, but no referenc was made to a possible third term for President Roosevelt.

Although scores of CIO unions, councils and state conventions had urged a third term for Mr. Roosevelt, convention leaders sidetracked any blanket reference to the New Deal.

As to President Roosevelt's recent request that both the CIO and AFL resume negotiations through which "labor peace" might be achieved, the convention dismissed the question with a terse resolution which recommended that an existing negotiating committee "be continued and authorized to exercise its discretion in any future negotiations" with AFL.

With reference to the part the Congress of Industrial Organizations will play in politics, the delegates approved unanimously a resolution placing the trust of the unions in Labor's Non-partican League. This league was commended for support of candidates committed to "a program of social and labor legislation." The resolution urged that "in view of the importance to labor of the x x x 1940 national election, the executive board take appropriate action to coordinate the political and legislative activities of each of its affiliates and to establish cooperation with progressive croups in support of a constructive program x x x."

The convention elects officers tomorrow and closes Saturday.

The United States department of labor criticized in one resolution as having failed to make itself "the vigorous champion of the wage earners," while having "assumed the role of adjuster and compromiser in controvention of its original purposes." Most of the speakers on this resolution were specific in exempting Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins from "undue blame."

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of United Mine Workers, declared "we are serving notice x x x that the time has arrived when labor must take its place in this setup so the labor department can function in the interest of labor as it was intended to do."

Representation of labor on the government board of the American Red Cross was urged in another resolution. President John L. Lewis contended the Red Cross was controlled "by those who set themselves up as the American aristocracy," and that the organization should be "democratized."

The 385 delegates amended the CIO constitution to increase the number of vice presidents from two to six. Officers now will consist of the president, six vice presidents and a secretary. The constitution also was amended to give the CIO its first paid officer by providing a salary (yet to be determined) for the secretary.

Girl Returns to School By Switching a Button

Salem, W. Va., Oct. 11 (AP)—Kathleen Wade switched a button in her home the other day and went "back" to school for the second year.

The Salem high school junior stricken with infantile paralysis in 1935, attends school classes through an inter-communication system between the school building and the Wade home.

A microphone picks up class room activities and delivers them to Kathleen's room. A switch of the button and she recites just as if she were in the schoolroom.

Kathleen completed her sophomore work last year with a perfect "attendance" record and earned a regular place on the school's monthly honor roll.

Mount Rainier Has A Peak Season

Tacoma, Wash. (AP) — Mountain climbers are becoming more numerous and more cautious if those who ascended Mount Rainier during the past season are any criterion. The 14,408-foot peak, considered by any the nation's ost difficult peak to ascend, was conquered by a record number of mountaineers—149—during the three summer months. Sixty-five per cent of thos starting the climb reached the top. There were no serious climbing accidents.

Advantage should be taken now of the warm soil to get all the bulbs planted, except the tulips, which may often be planted in November with best results.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Storing dahlia tubers

October's frosts may mean the end of dahlia blooms, but they mark the beginning of the winter storage problem. After frost has killed the blooms the stalks should be cut down to within 6 or 8 inches of the ground.

After the tubers are dug up, turn them upside down to drain. Excess moisture may cause them to rot during the winter if this precaution is not taken. Let the tubers remain in the sun for a day to dry off, then shake the earth from them.

Label each tuber as shown in today's Garden-Graph. Then pack them away in boxes of dry sand, sawdust or peat. The tubers can be stored in either a cool or warm cellar if the atmosphere is not too dry.

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

There are a number of hardy annuals which may be had in extra early bloom next year if the seeds are sown just before freezing weather and in well-prepared soil. Among these hardy annuals are the snapdragons, stocks, clarkias, Drummondi phlox, verbenas, cornflowers, alyssum, annual pinks and candytuft.

Married Men Live Longer Owing to Care by Wives

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

You'd know by his handwriting that he was no stranger to good times. His letter was witty, half humorous, half sad, as he inquired "is it true that married men live longer than bachelors?"

Handwriting, as you know, is very revealing. My correspondent's had such a headlong dash that you felt when he let himself in with a none-too-steady latch-key, the milkman was probably making his rounds. This young man—he indulged in a six-page typewritten confession to me—would probably have continued on his gladsome way taking up girls and dropping them like discarded toys, drinking more than human nature could stand, and not counting the cost where fun was concerned. But then his doctor threw a scare into him, told him his threat was in bad shape. The trouble hadn't reached his lungs yet, but he'd have to watch his step, and it might not be a bad idea if he settled down, stopped raising Cain and got married. The doctor told him that married men live longer than single ones. Apparently this life insurance dictum was a new one to our friend of the dashing handwriting.

Did married men really live longer?

Millions Willing

I quoted some life insurance statistics that I happened to have at hand, and then said that it was a question in my mind whether a man who had 'taken his fun where he found it' from the time he left high school had the makings of a desirable husband for a nice girl of 22. You see there was a nice girl of 22—there seem to be millions of them willing to marry all sorts of undesirables.

This young man didn't seem to care particularly about this 22-year-old. His matrimonial urge was prompted by the doctor telling him married men live longer than single ones. What the doctor intended to convey was that a home might prove to be some sort of anchor against his general roving.

To add to the doctor's suggestion, it seems to me that it would be sensible thing for this young man to go to a dry climate—the Adirondacks, Arizona, or some such place—and concentrate on getting his health restored. And while he is breathing in the ozone, to do a little good hard thinking. He should make up his mind whether his idea of life is being a roisterer or settling down, and he should, in all decency, give up the idea of marrying the 22-year-old or anyone else until his health is restored and he is positive that he intends to go domestic.

They Get Good Care

Married men live longer than single men because their wives take care of them. Even if their wives are not finished chefs, there are regular meals every day, and there is that fruitful source of argument, "please put on your rubbers," when it happens to be raining. Friend husband may regard this wifely request as a violation of his rights, but probably he does put them on, and saves himself cold, grippe, penumonia.

Wives have a way of looking after their husbands the way they look after their children. A husband is probably "the most troublesome child" of the whole bunch, but somehow or other he can manage to survive longer than the bachelors. On the whole, a normal man is happier married than single. Unless his wife is an utter slouch proud of her, and it goes without saying that there art no kids like his kids. Yes, it's better to marry.—Distributed by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

She's Really Serious

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl I've been going with for a long time doesn't like to admit her feelings to me, but if I don't fuss over her she doesn't like it. She never says anything nice to me, but I'm always complimenting her on everything she does, and on her clothes. I notice everything new she wears and so on. We've had a few misunderstandings, but nothing serious.

She's a likeable girl, doesn't drink or smoke, and I have the greatest respect for her. When I ask for a "date" she always hesitates before she accepts, but never turns me down. Her indecision drives me wild at times.

Do you think she really loves me and is only hiding her feelings? Or what? Please advise me.

IMPATIENT

As long as she accepts your date, why worry about it? You must make some allowance for the old-fashioned art of coquetry on the part of this "nice" young lady. Probably you wouldn't find her half as attractive if she showed her feelings more than she does. And if I were you I wouldn't take her hesitation so seriously.

Quite Contrary

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I fell in love with a girl years ago, and knew she was the only one for me. She also said she loved me, and we considered ourselves engaged though without a ring. I had an excellent paying position, and we started to save for our little home and made all sorts of plans. Then all of a sudden my firm went broke, and of course I lost out too.

For two years now she has seemed indifferent. Sometimes she can be so nice to me, and then again she pretends she doesn't care. Then I found out she was going to dances with another man. I don't have much money now, and can't give her many good times, although we can take in an occasional movie or a concert. She knows my funds are low, and has given me the impression she will wait. If I thought she didn't care for me any more I'd give her up, but there are times when she appears to be very much in love with me.

She doesn't want me to go out with other girls, and gets very jealous if I even mention one. I think this is selfish of her, as she admits going out with other men. She knows I love only her.

Sometimes I think it might be wise to go away for a couple of years, and then again I might try going with another girl, but I know no other could take her place. RED.

I hope by the time this letter is printed, you will have made up your mind as to what you will do. Have you tried any of the Vocational Training classes, to try and help yourself in finding a better position where you will get more pay, so that you can make plans for your marriage? This may be the cause of her indifference.

IT'S A WOMAN'S WAR, TOO

Feminine Aid Behind the Lines and at Home Becomes Important Factor in Latest European Conflict as Wives, Mothers and Sisters Turn to Man-Sized Tasks

Modern woman joins husband, son and sweetheart in "carrying on"

By LILLIAN CAMPBELL
Central Press Staff Writer

Cleveland, O. Oct. 12—Will this—the latest of the great wars of mankind — prove to be a woman's war, too?

Dispatches from the belligerent European countries mention increasingly the participation of women in virtually all lines of war activity save actual fighting at the front.

It is hard to believe, in the light of recent events, that less than 100 years ago — it was in 1856 — Florence Nightingale, a woman of aristocratic parentage, was considered very daring because she studied nursing and labored to ease the suffering on the battle fields of the Cremean war.

During the American Civil war many courageous women on both sides volunteered to act as nurses behind the battle lines but their services were graciously declined. The front was still considered strictly the province of man.

Women in the World War

Not until the first World war did women really become a significant factor in war work. From 1914-1918 women served not only as nurses in the base hospitals but were active in YMCA and Red Cross work abroad. Professional entertainers, such as Elsie Janis, abandoned their stage careers to sing and dance for the men on leave from the front. And quite a number of women acted as ambulance drivers.

And now comes the second world war, and few women in any of the countries involved will escape the horrors of the catastrophe. "Kissing the boys goodbye" will be the least of their jobs, and rolling bandages, knitting sweaters and socks, even nursing and driving ambulances are a minor part of their participation in this war.

Women are not only saying goodbye to their sons, husbands and sweethearts, they are bidding farewell to their little ones who are being sent to safer (?) places, to protect them against the bombs which may be dropped from enemy planes upon civilian populations as well as on the fighters at the front.

And when or if "Johnny comes marching home again," he may find no home or family to welcome him—only a gaping hole in the earth, a few splinters of the house and furniture — and silence! Keeping "the home fires burning" has become next to impossible in modern warfare.

In the American Revolution Molly Pitcher won great renown (or so the story goes) by snatching the gun from her dying husband's hands and continuing to fire against the British. But today women are forming battalions to march to the front to fight side by side with their men.

At home, women are taking men's places in civil life — driving milk wagons, manning street cars, taxis buses and doing all sorts of jobs. In England every member of the household has some kind of job. Work is good for them. It aids in keeping up the morale, quite aside from its use in helping to win the war.

Bravely Risk Death

But what desolation in the hearts of these women! Are absent husbands, fathers, sons, sweethearts safe? What of the children sent to "safe" places — for strangers to care for? And when will death rain from the skies on them and their babies too tiny to be sent away?

"War is hell," as General Sherman is reported to have said, and modern warfare is a very special and unthinkable kind of hell — a type that even General Sherman never dreamed of. And women, who never are included in the councils of the mighty who decide that wars must be fought, must fight in them, too. They no longer stay at home and wring their hands and pray.

Women, too, are going in more and more for aviation. In Russia, we are told, women aviators and chauffeurs are "doing their bit," side by side with men. Will we see, before this war is over, "the hand that rocks the cradle" releasing bombs that bring death and destruction on other women's homes?

Grasshopper Pest Is Routed by Turkeys

Channing, Tex. (AP)—In the spring Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Wiseman discovered their farm near here was "almost covered" by grasshoppers. They decided the insects would make good feed for a flock of turkeys.

So they bought 1,200 poults. But the grasshoppers were exterminated by the young birds almost overnight. Not since then has there been an insect on the Wiseman place and the turkeys had to be fed standard rations. But Mr. and Mrs. Wiseman are not sorry they found themselves in the trukey business by accident.

They have a crop of 300 birds that will average more than forty pounds for Thanksgiving tables. The remainder of the flock will be plump about Christmas.

Turkey Dinner To Open Drive

Members of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, will launch their 1940 membership drive with a turkey dinner next Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Legion home.

After hearing addresses by James Fitzgerald, Bethesda state commander, and Jack Tribby, state adjutant, Baltimore, the 425 members of Post No. 13 will sally forth to put the membership total up to the 500 mark.

Guard Rookies

That doesn't mean the gun goes off. It's just practice known in the army as 'preliminaries.'

Squeezing the trigger and hearing no explosion is often somewhat aggravating to the rookie, who has always prided himself on his expertness at shooting small game. The rookie often fancies himself as looking very silly pulling the trigger of an empty gun.

Shooting at Last

But finally, the trigger squeezing is over and he is sent to the .22 calibre Springfield range where at last, thank goodness, he has a chance to bust away at a target.

And at this point the rookie surveys his work with some pride and decides he is ready for action.

But that's where he's wrong.

The rookie is next taught the handling and operation of the Browning automatic rifle, and then he is taught a good many things he never knew before about the care and use of his equipment.

Bayonet Drill Next

The next chore to be mastered is the use of the bayonet, a toy which the rookie will admit he has had small experiences with up to this point.

The use of the bayonet is an art in itself, army men declare, an art particularly relished by the Scotch Highlander and the French poilu. Both these breeds love a bayonet to death. The doughboys aren't so bad either, they say modestly.

But the next item is something of a bore but rather essential in the army. This is guard duty.

Rookies Like Sham War

All American rookies like this very much, officers declare. The general idea is to maneuver a bunch of men into a position where they can blast the enemy into Kingdom Come providing the enemy doesn't blast them first.

It's like a game where the participants play for keeps.

This is the sort of thing the National Guard did this summer at Camp Ritchie and which was conducted on a large scale in mass maneuvers in Virginia and New York.

Anyway They Learn Something

Some said the maneuvers were executed very poorly; others thought it was pretty good. At any event, a lot of rookies learned a good deal, which was the point of the thing.

Then, having learned first aid and a few preliminary principles, the rookie is ready to really begin his education in earnest.

Strange Chess

done him much good in post-war Germany.

A fat bishop? Possibly the button came from a stocky bourgeois Frenchman who had been very happy in the wine business until war wiped away his future.

Set Became Valuable

Prior to his death, Dr. Sibley received many generous offers for his grim set of chess pieces, Mayor Irvine said. A Washington officer once told the former dentist he could pick out the best chess set in Washington in exchange for the war pieces. Dr. Sibley turned down the offer.

Mayor Irvine said yesterday that the pieces would probably be turned over to the Smithsonian Institute. Friends have advised Mrs. Sibley to give the set to the museum as an example of the ingenuity shown by an American soldier.

Dick Tracy — Greasy Business

Britain Refuses

lasting peace backed by "effective guarantees" or a war in which France and Britain "must persevere in their duty to the end."

Almost in the next breath, however, the prime minister expressed doubt Hitler could give such guarantees, declaring to the House of Commons:

"The plain truth is that, after our past experience, it is no longer possible to rely upon the unsupported word of the present German government."

It was Chamberlain's first speech since Hitler in the Reichstag last Friday outlined his ideas for a European peace, and, with Premier Daladier's Tuesday broadcast, constituted the allied reply to the fuehrer's proposals.

No Specific Conditions

Without fixing specific conditions, Chamberlain said, "either the German government must give convincing proof of the sincerity of their desire for peace by definite acts and by the provision of effective guarantees of their intention to fulfill their undertakings or we must persevere in our duty to the end.

"It is for Germany to make the choice."

As the roar of "hear, hears" died away, members of the opposition were on their feet demanding a more definite outline of Britain's war aims.

Chamberlain indicated he would make another statement next Wednesday?. By then Britain will have had oportunity to receive the new Italian Ambassador Guiseppe Bastianini who reports from Rome said was bearing an aide memoire giving Premier Mussolini's views on peace proposals and an international conference.

The 70-year-old prime minister read his answer to Hitler in precise emphatic tones — more vigorous and more dramatic than those he usually employs.

Hitler's Proposals Vague

He snapped his words as he said the proposals in Hitler's speech were "vague and uncertain and contains no suggestion for righting the wrongs done to Czecho-Slovakia and Poland."

Gripping one hand in the other he added sharply "we must take it then that the proposals which the German chancellor puts forward for the establishment of what he calls the 'certainty of European security' are to be based on recognition of his conquests and his right to do what he pleases with the conquered."

"It would be impossible for Great Britain to accept any such basis without forfeiting her honor and abandoning her claim that international disputes should be settled by discussion and not by force."

Chamberlain's voice sank low as he predicted "whatever may be the issue of the present struggle and in whatever way it may be brought to a conclusion the world will not be the same world that we have known before."

Questions by members of parliament for a more specific definition of British war aims drwe from Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax the assertion that when the members were "able to study the statement you will perhaps find that a good many of the points that are in your minds are covered either explicitly or implicitly."

French Attacking

Erun tomorrow for a general review of th war and of the situation arising from statements of Daladier and Chamberlain that the next move is up to Germany.

With the sixth wek of the war drawing to a close, the French had yet to take any major objective. They had, however, maintained positions in advanced posts in the Saar and Palatinate districts.

The general staff's morning communique said German attacks spread all along the front from the Moslle to the Rhine. The sharpest engagement reported was in the Moselle valley around new French positions north of Perl.

(A German communique this morning said a French plane had ben shot down in an aerial fight south of Lauterbourg, France and reported "minor reconnoitering, troop and artillery activity" on the Western front.)

Military advices said the German attacks were limited in extent, but increasing in violence.

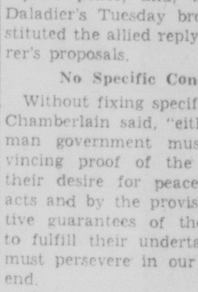

The Moselle assault assumed the characteristics of a miniature offensive, thes reports said, with brief artillery barrages followed by a charge of infantry companies supported by automatic arms. The French reported the attack repulsed after one of the longest individual engagements yet undertaken.

Intermittent rains and cloudy weather contributed to the effectiveness of the defense.

In France the poor are assisted party through public "bureaux de bienfaisance" and partly by private and ecclesiastical charity.

Turkey Dinner To Open Drive

Members of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, will launch their 1940 membership drive with a turkey dinner next Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Legion home.

After hearing addresses by James Fitzgerald, Bethesda state commander, and Jack Tribby, state adjutant, Baltimore, the 425 members of Post No. 13 will sally forth to put the membership total up to the 500 mark.

the right manner, and squeeze the trigger.

That doesn't mean the gun goes off. It's just practice known in the army as 'preliminaries.'

Squeezing the trigger and hearing no explosion is often somewhat aggravating to the rookie, who has always prided himself on his expertness at shooting small game. The rookie often fancies himself as looking very silly pulling the trigger of an empty gun.

Shooting at Last

But finally, the trigger squeezing is over and he is sent to the .22 calibre Springfield range where at last, thank goodness, he has a chance to bust away at a target.

And at this point the rookie surveys his work with some pride and decides he is ready for action.

But that's where he's wrong.

The rookie is next taught the handling and operation of the Browning automatic rifle, and then he is taught a good many things he never knew before about the care and use of his equipment.

Bayonet Drill Next

The next chore to be mastered is the use of the bayonet, a toy which the rookie will admit he has had small experiences with up to this point.

The use of the bayonet is an art in itself, army men declare, an art particularly relished by the Scotch Highlander and the French poilu. Both these breeds love a bayonet to death. The doughboys aren't so bad either, they say modestly.

But the next item is something of a bore but rather essential in the army. This is guard duty.

Rookies Like Sham War

All American rookies like this very much, officers declare. The general idea is to maneuver a bunch of men into a position where they can blast the enemy into

Dick Tracy — Greasy Business

Kingdom Come providing the enemy doesn't blast them first.

It's like a game where the participants play for keeps.

This is the sort of thing the National Guard did this summer at Camp Ritchie and which was conducted on a large scale in mass maneuvers in Virginia and New York.

Anyway They Learn Something

Some said the maneuvers were executed very poorly; others thought it was pretty good. At any event, a lot of rookies learned a good deal, which was the point of the thing.

Then, having learned first aid and a few preliminary principles, the rookie is ready to really begin his education in earnest.

Strange Chess

done him much good in post-war Germany.

A fat bishop? Possibly the button came from a stocky bourgeois Frenchman who had been very happy in the wine business until war wiped away his future.

Set Became Valuable

Prior to his death, Dr. Sibley received many generous offers for his grim set of chess pieces, Mayor Irvine said. A Washington officer once told the former dentist he could pick out the best chess set in Washington in exchange for the war pieces, Dr. Sibley turned down the offer.

Mayor Irvine said yesterday that the pieces would probably be turned over to the Smithsonian Institute. Friends have advised Mrs. Sibley to give the set to the museum as an example of the ingenuity shown by an American soldier.

Britain Refuses

lasting peace backed by "effective guarantees" or a war in which France and Britain "must persevere in their duty to the end."

Almost in the next breath, however, the prime minister expressed doubt Hitler could give such guarantees, declaring to the House of Commons:

"The plain truth is that, after our past experience, it is no longer possible to rely upon the unsupported word of the present German government."

It was Chamberlain's first speech since Hitler in the Reichstag last Friday outlined his ideas for a European peace, and, with Premier Daladier's Tuesday broadcast, constituted the allied reply to the fuehrer's proposals.

No Specific Conditions

Without fixing specific conditions, Chamberlain said, "either the German government must give convincing proof of the sincerity of their desire for peace by definite acts and by the provision of effective guarantees of their intention to fulfill their undertakings or we must persevere in our duty to the end.

"It is for Germany to make the choice."

As the roar of "hear, hears" died away, members of the opposition were on their feet demanding a more definite outline of Britain's war aims.

Chamberlain indicated he would make another statement next Wednesday?. By then Britain will have had oportunity to receive the new Italian Ambassador Guiseppe Bastianini who reports from Rome said was bearing an aide memoire giving Premier Mussolini's views on peace proposals and an international conference.

The 70-year-old prime minister read his answer to Hitler in precise emphatic tones — more vigorous and more dramatic than those he usually employs.

Hitler's Proposals Vague

He snapped his words as he said the proposals in Hitler's speech were "vague and uncertain and contains no suggestion for righting the wrongs done to Czecho-Slovakia and Poland."

Gripping one hand in the other he added sharply "we must take it then that the proposals which the German chancellor puts forward for the establishment of what he calls the 'certainty of European security' are to be based on recognition of his conquests and his right to do what he pleases with the conquered."

"It would be impossible for Great Britain to accept any such basis without forfeiting her honor and abandoning her claim that international disputes should be settled by discussion and not by force."

Chamberlain's voice sank low as he predicted "whatever may be the issue of the present struggle and in whatever way it may be brought to a conclusion the world will not be the same world that we have known before."

Questions by members of parliament for a more specific definition of British war aims drwe from Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax the assertion that when the members were "able to study the statement you will perhaps find that a good many of the points that are in your minds are covered either explicitly or implicitly."

Grand Jury Begins Investigation of Building Costs

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12 (AP)—A federal grand jury, investigating building costs in Pittsburgh, began questioning today the first of 1,000 witnesses summoned for the inquiry.

Among them were Council President James L. O'Toole and Dr. I. Hope Alexander, city health director, who have charged contractors with collusion in bidding on public works.

A survey by the Federal Home Loan bank showed Pittsburgh was second only to Cleveland in building costs and that a standard six-room home cost $1,000 more to build than it does in Philadelphia.

Air Line Stewardess Burns to Death

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 12 (AP)—The body of Lorraine Rosemarie Goodall, 23, an air line stewardess, was found in a flaming automobile in the rear of a service station today.

Battalion Chief Frank Kispert of the fire department said Miss Goodall has been burned to death. A gallon can was in the coupe but Kispert said there was no odor of gasoline.

Neighbors were awakened by the blowing of an automobile horn and found the machine in flames.

Miss Goodall, who attended the University of California in 1933 and 1934, had been a United Air Lines stewardess on the Oakland-Los Angeles run for six months.

Grand Jury Begins Investigation of Building Costs

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12 (AP)—A federal grand jury, investigating building costs in Pittsburgh, began questioning today the first of 1,000 witnesses summoned for the inquiry.

Among them were Council President James L. O'Toole and Dr. I. Hope Alexander, city health director, who have charged contractors with collusion in bidding on public works.

A survey by the Federal Home Loan bank showed Pittsburgh was second only to Cleveland in building costs and that a standard six-room home cost $1,000 more to build than it does in Philadelphia.

Air Line Stewardess Burns to Death

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 12 (AP)—The body of Lorraine Roemarie Goodall, 23, an air line stewardess, was found in a flaming automobile in the rear of a service station today.

Battalion Chief Frank Kispert of the fire department said Miss Goodall has been burned to death. A gallon can was in the coupe but Kispert said there was no odor of gasoline.

Neighbors were awakened by the blowing of an automobile horn and found the machine in flames.

Miss Goodall, who attended the University of California in 1933 and 1934, had been a United Air Lines stewardess on the Oakland-Los Angeles run for six months.

Night Baseball Saved A.L. During Season

Made Up Losses By Postponement Of Sunday Games

Cub President Has Seen No One About Gabby Hartnett's Job

Baer's Demand for $10,000 Cost Him Bout with Bob Nestell

Chicago, Oct. 12 (AP) — Thanks to night baseball, American League attedance this year gained a "draw" with that of the very good 1938 season, William Harridge, junior circuit president, said today.

"In spite of inclement weather which postponed several opening season games and numerous big Sunday programs we drew about as many fans this season as we did last," Harridge said. "Night baseball in Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago was one of the biggest reasons our figures stayed up to the 1938 standard."

Nomination for the best midwestern true story of the young gridiron season: Michigan had the ball on Michigan State's 2 yard line last Saturday. Forrest Evasshevski, Michigan quarterback, sent Tom Harmon through the line, Harmon carrying the ball over for a touchdown. But Evashevski thought the referee had called the play back and when the ball was placed on the 2 yard line for the conversion attempt, Evashevski again sent Harmon crashing between the tackles. This time Harmon was stopped cold— and only then did Evashevski learn Harmon had picked up six points on his first smash and lost one on his second.

Facts and rumors on the Chicago Cub's managerial situation: Facts: P. K. Wrigley, Cub president, has interviewed no one on the subject of replacing Gabby Hartnett: rumors: That Hartnett will remain another season; Wrigley not only is "hot" about the way his boys folded up against the White Sox in the city series, but is also put out because Hartnett reportedly failed to contact him from prior to the spring trip until mid-season.

Punts and dashes: Minnesota must be slipping . . . . Some midwest observers who have picked the Gophers to win every game for the past five or six seasons are switching to Purdue as the choice Saturday. . . .

They say Max Baer's demand of a $10,000 guarantee has eliminated him from a Nov. 3 match at the Stadium with Bob Nestell. . . . Lou Nova will get the offer. . . . Clarence (Pants) Rowland, Cub scout, did a lot of confabing at Cincinnati which is supposed to have laid the groundwork for Cub activity in the winter baseball meetings Dec. 4-9 in the Ohio city. . . . The Cubs really are going to unload some timber — or just dump it. . . .

Loar bagged 38 of a possible 50 and George Buchhannon got 32 for runner-up honors.

Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech Game "Sell-Out"

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12 (AP)—If you had intended to buy a ticket to the Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech game Oct. 28 but just never got around to it, you might as well forget about it now.

Tech officials reported today the low priced end section seats were gone a month ago and the side section seats, including temporary bleachers, were sold out ten days ago.

Approximately 23,000 will be at Pitt stadium for the classic, about 10,000 fewer than the record attendance for the bowl. Tech officials explained they were limiting the size of temporary stands in order to give regular seatholders better vision.

Lyrical Lardner Looks At The Grid Prospects

By RING LARDNER
(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Oct. 12 — When the poet Swinburne first began to pick football winners in rhyme, a very comical conversation took place between Browning and Tennyson, according to Spalding's Basketball Guide for 1931 (Page 76.)

It ran as follows:

Browning — "I see Swinburne is picking his winners in rhyme."

Tennyson — "Oh, is that what it is?"

Fortunately, the poet Swinbourne was not sensitive to criticism, and he and I had many a laugh over this incident at the club. As I told Swinny, "Either you're good or you ain't." Now in my case — well, let's get down to business.

It's easy come and easy go
With those who follow Lardner's tips;
But Brown is high, and Colgate's low—
I got it straight from the hoss's lips.

As I was telling Swinburne, either you have the gift or you have'nt. For instance:

Until the day they win one,
I'll pick against the Hosier's.
Wisconsin's gonna pin one
Upon them steady loosiers.

According to the rulebook—Hoyle on verse — a sonnet must have fourteen lines. That shows you how much Hoyle knows.

Pin your faith on some other guy
If Harvard fails to demolish Chi.

Forward my mail to Singapore
If Calif. wins the game from Ore.
And bury me out on the lone prai-ree
If Chattanooga beats Tennessee.

A thing like this is just as easy as rolling onto a log:

Take Illinois if you care to, chum,
But the bankroll over at our house
Goes (the whole colossal sum)
On U. S. C. and her powerhouse.

The upset special: Duke will take
A pretty good shellacking;
Hey, Pittsburgh, don't for Pete's sake,
Forget you've got my ($1) backing.

Georgetown's team will cook the goose
Of the luckless boys from Syracuse.

The odds are short, but it's dough in your purse, sir—
Bet Alabama to trample on Mercer.

The U. S. Army's undermanned;
They're sad at old West Point;
Columbia is is coming, and
She's apt to wreck the joint.

For that matter, Tennyson used to fumble now and then himself. Remember "I come from haunts of coot and hern"? "Hern" instead of "heron." He was certainly reaching for that one.

Northwestern, at some later date,
Will win; but not from Ohio State.

Texas is tough, but put your stake on
Oklahoma to cop the bacon.

The loyal sons of Arkansas
(The Razorbacks to you)
Will never fail her; they'll murder Baylor
By pretty nearly a point or two.

Penn will be Eli Yale's undoing.
If you want your money back try suing.
Iowa's team is coming along.
But Michigan looks a bit too strong.

S. M. U. will probably fall
To beat old Notre Dame up;
But if the Texans prevail,
Keep cool, boys. Don't yell "frame-up!"

And then we wrote:
Minnesota is good and strong.
But you can't pooh-pooh Purdue;
I'll take the latter, and if I'm wrong,
It could have happened to you.
Go out and bet your family plate
On Washington over Washington State.

Let the Princetons buy your dinner;
Back Cornell, the surefire winner.
At the end of a duel of violet and blue,
Of passing and punting and kicking,
North Carolina will beat NYU.
It's a long way to go for a licking.

And finally, just to show you what rats we poets are in our hearts:
Pickle as a two-bit weathervane,
I quit on Fordham, and I pick Tulane.

Ivy League, Big Ten and Coast In Grid Spotlight

Mid-West Also Offers Top-Notch Program of Games

By BILL BONI

New York, Oct. 12 (AP)—While the members of the Southeast and Southwest Conferences again will be concentrating on intersectional warfare, in which they won such standout honors a week ago, the emphasis will be on intro-conferences games Saturday in the Eastern Ivy League, the Big Ten and the Pacific Coast conference.

The Big Ten and the Ivy League rarely have presented such promising programs on the same day.

In the mid-west, as counter-attractions to Notre Dame's clash with Southern Methodist, the Western Conference will offer games between Michigan and Iowa, Northwestern and Ohio State, Indiana and Wisconsin and Minnesota and Purdue.

At least one of the Texas in each of these games is conceded a chance at winning the Big Ten title. . .

Cornell at Princeton

Top attraction on the Eastern Ivy League slate is Cornell's invasion of Princeton.

Off the score, the Big Red was impressive in starting out with a 19-6 victory over Syracuse. But close observers, while crediting Coach Carl Snavely with having built a fine line, rated the Cornell offensive as pretty much of an "Off-and-on" proposition. Princeton, on the other hand, boomed as the best "Big Three" prospect, showed little more than passing strength (the name is Dave Allerdice) against Williams.

Right back of this game in point of attractiveness comes Yale's stand against Pennsylvania which, with Princeton, is expected to give Cornell the run for Ivy League first money. Dartmouth and Columbia, other Ivy charter members, meanwhile will be giving Navy and Army their first tests against accredited football powers.

On the coast, where the intersectional headliner will be Southern California-Illinois, sectional attention will be directed chiefly to California's attempt to get out of a two-defeat slump against Oregon, and U. C. L. A.'s try for its third straight triumph, this time over Standford.

Other Games

Conference activity otherwise will be sporadic.

Only Auburn-Mississippi State is booked in the southeast circuit, which had Florida meeting Boston College today and Saturday will have Tulane making its stand against Fordham, Georgia against embittered Holy Cross, and Louisiana State against Rice.

Lone Southwest Conference game will be Baylor-Arkansas, with Texas Christian, Texas Aggie, S. M. U. and Rice tackling intersectional foes in Temple, Villanova, Notre Dame and L. S. U.; Iowa State-Nebraska is the only Big Six game on tap, and the Southern Conference will present N. C. State-Wake Forest, V. P.—William and Mary, and Furman-the Citadel.

This league's two leaders, Duke and North Carolina, will be engaged intersectionally against Pitt and New York U., respectively. That Pitt-Duke affairs should be one of the games of the day.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Oct. 12 (AP) — The National League, suffering from cramps in the vicinity of its prestige, may have acquired an antidote for that American League poison in the signing of Frankie Frisch as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

There has been some criticism of the docile attitude of the Cincinnati Reds in the recent world series; that they went on the field filled with awe for the Yankees instead of muttering: "Aw, the Yanks."

There may have been a certain defeatist attitude. We couldn't say, and if there was, we wouldn't blame Deacon Bill McKechnie, who did a grand job of holding the team together in the stretch run.

Frisch never has been a man to get a hollow stomach and folding legs in the presence of any man or group of men. He was trained in the old John McGraw school, which had as its main course a study of the various methods of expressing contempt for any and all opposition.

He managed the last National League team to win a world championship—his 1934 Cardinals defeated Detroit four games to three.

He has been in eight world series —four with the Giants and four with the Cards—and came out with a 50-50 record.

A manager isn't a ball team, but sometimes he can imbue his players with a little of his own fire and brimstone. Nobody ever accused Frisch's Cardinals of playing pattycake baseball.

Naturally the new Pirate boss must take care of the little detail of winning a National League pennant before he can march up to the Yankees (that's taken for granted) with a chip on his shoulder. That's not going to be so easy, considering that the Pirates finished this year marching very bravely on their shoulderblades.

And if Frisch doesn't eventually do it, it may be the other half of the Brooklyn-Pittsburgh axis that does, and Brooklyn is managed by another hot potato who wouldn't know an inferiority complex from a dish of spinach.

Leo Durocher, who led the amazing Dodgers out of the second-division wilderness in his first year as pilot, played on Frisch's 1934 Cardinals, and his fiery leadership unquestionably had much to do with Brooklyn's success this year. In fact, more than a few critics believe that had the Dodgers a little more luck with pitchers they, and not the Reds, would have been the party of the second part in the series.

All this, naturally, isn't by any means trying to steal any credit away from the Yanks, who unquestionably rank as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, teams of all time.

But the reappearance of the manager who piloted the last National league club to win a world title, and whose lifetime world series record shows he's never licked until the last man is out in the last game, is at least a good omen for the strangely quiet National League fans.

If Frisch's team gets into a world series, his players may experience that same wide-eyed awe for their opponents as the Reds possibly experienced this year. But, by gum, little Frankie will whale the tar out of the first man who shows it.

Passing May Spell Difference Between Rivals for State Crown

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 12 (AP) — Passing well may be the difference between Charleston and Parkersburg and their hopes for state scholastic honors Saturday afternoon.

And the same factor may play a leading part in another headline scholastic clash featuring a tough Shinnston eleven and powerful Washington Irving at Clarksburg tomorrow.

Although the defending state champions from Parkersburg have just begun the hardest sledding on their schedule, the Big Reds' showing to date makes the possibility good that Charleston will be eliminated from the race, although the Mountain Lions seem to be the favorites.

Huntington, Morgantown, Wheeling, Oak Hill and the Fairmonts East and West already have been relegated to the second rank in the state championship competition.

Also with a possible bearing on the ultimate result of the state race is the Shinnston-Washington Irving contest.

Mickey McClung's Shinnston men already have been metioned as the prospective champions of the Big Ten Coference and they rule slight favorites over the Clarksburg eleven. Both are undefeated and untied but both have been scored upon.

Another Clarksburg team, Victory, plays its second game in four days Saturday in entertaining the Huntington Pony Express and as a result probably will find the 7-6 loss to Fairmont West duplicated or bettered.

Williamson's Wolfpack, its goal line still as unsullied as it was in the Huntington contest, will hang out the victory flag again tomorrow when it plays host to Wayne.

Elsewhere in the south, the unbeaten Gary Coaldiggers sail serenely into a Friday night game at home with Northfork. Gary still confident it won't be seriously threatened.

Rainelle, about whom little has been heard to date, may surprise Princeton tomorrow night with a display of the excellent football it has shown to date.

HERE'S THE WAY many car owners do it. They put in a couple of quarts of Du Pont "Zerone" early in the season for protection against rusting and the sudden cold snaps they know will come.

Keller's Homecoming Could Be Made Long Drawn-Out Affair

Frederick, Md., Oct. 12 (AP)—Charlie Keller's triumphant home-coming began to look today like a long-drawn out affair.

Frederick county's gift to the New York Yankees became the city's No. 1 citizen last night, when the Chamber of Commerce gave him a banquet, and the youthful hero of the World Series won't be allowed to forget it for some time to come.

Various organizations, groups, and individuals were making frantic bids for his attention. If he wanted to, it appeared, Charlie could eat free from now 'till Christmas at one banquet and luncheon after another.

Tonight, after a day as honor guest of the Frederick County fair, Charlie was programmed as the No. 1 future farmer of Maryland.

What Charlie's immediate plans were, so far as acceptance of other invitations, remained his secret, but there was a growing suspicion among his closests friends that baseball's newest hero was about ready to spend some quiet days at home with his family.

One invitation he snapped up quickly, he will be the University of Maryland's guest of honor at the annual homecoming day at College Park Oct. 28. Maryland's football team meets Florida on that date and Keller will be the No. 1 returning alumnus.

Maryland Netmen Win Mid-Atlantic College Doubles

But William Rawlings of North Carolina Tops Deacon Parsons

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 12. (AP)—The University of Maryland wrested the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate doubles tennis title from the University of North Carolina today but William (Red) Rawlings saved the day for the Tarheels in the singles.

The Maryland team of Al Ritzenberg and Nathan Askin, Southern Conference champions, turned back a game and hard-fighting Carolina combbination in Rawlings and Willam Meserol 1-6, 6-4, 6-3, 9-7.

Rawlings bested Delos (Deacon) Parsons of Marshall College, West Virginia closed champion, in a three hour and 15 minute match which ended just as darkness fell 7-9, 11-9, 0-6, 6-2, 6-2.

The Carolinians hung on grimly until the end in the doubles play but the Southern champions broke through Meserol's service and then won on their own to take the match in the 16th game of the fourth set.

Rawlings' apparently better condition proved the downfall of Parsons in the singles.

At the outset it looked like Parsons, even when he dropped the second set. But the Red-headed Carolinian never let down and as Parsons tired, Rawlings blasted him with repeated placements.

Night Baseball Saved A.L. During Season

Made Up Losses By Postponement Of Sunday Games

Baer's Demand for $10,000 Cost Him Bout with Bob Nestell

Chicago, Oct. 12 (AP) — Thanks to night baseball, American League attedance this year gained a "draw" with that of the very good 1938 season, William Harridge, junior circuit president, said today.

"In spite of inclement weather which postponed several opening season games and numerous big Sunday programs we drew about as many fans this season as we did last," Harridge said. "Night baseball in Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago was one of the biggest reasons our figures stayed up to the 1938 standard."

Nomination for the best mid-western true story of the young gridiron season: Michigan had the ball on Michigan State's 2 yard line last Saturday. Forrest Evasshevski, Michigan quarterback, sent Tom Harmon through the line, Harmon carrying the ball over for a touchdown. But Evashevski thought the referee had called the play back and when the ball was placed on the 2 yard line for the conversion attempt, Evashevski again sent Harmon crashing between the tackles. This time Harmon was stopped cold— and only then did Evashevski learn Harmon had picked up six points on his first smash and lost one on his second.

Facts and rumors on the Chicago Cub's managerial situation: Facts: P. K. Wrigley, Cub president, has interviewed no one on the subject of replacing Gabby Hartnett: rumors: That Hartnett will remain another season; Wrigley not only is "hot" about the way his boys folded up against the White Sox in the city series, but is also put out because Hartnett reportedly failed to contact him from prior to the spring trip until mid-season.

Punts and dashes: Minnesota must be slipping . . . . Some mid-west observers who have picked the Gophers to win every game for the past five or six seasons are switching to Purdue as the choice Saturday. . . .

They say Max Baer's demand of a $10,000 guarantee has eliminated him from a Nov. 3 match at the Stadium with Bob Nestell. . . . Lou Nova will get the offer. . . . Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech Game "Sell-Out"

Approximately 83,000 will be at Pitt stadium for the classic, about 10,000 fewer than the record attendance for the hunt. Tech officials explained they were limiting the use of temporary stands in order to give regular seatholders better vision.

Lyrical Lardner Looks At The Grid Prospects

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Oct. 12 — When the poet Swinburne first began to pick football winners in rhyme, a very comical conversation took place between Browning and Tennyson, according to Spalding's Basketball Guide for 1931 (Page 76.)

It ran as follows:

Browning — "I see Swinburne is picking his winners in rhyme."

Tennyson — "Oh, is that what it is?"

Fortunately, the poet Swinbourne was not sensitive to criticism, and he and I had many a laugh over this incident at the club. As I told Swinny, "Either you're good or you ain't." Now in my case — well, let's get down to business.

It's easy come and easy go
With those who follow Lardner's tips;
But Brown is high, and Colgate's low—
I got it straight from the hoss's lips.

As I was telling Swinburne, either you have the gift or you have'nt. For instance:

Until the day they win one,
I'll pick against the Hosier's.
Wisconsin's gonna pin one
Upon them steady loosiers.

According to the rulebook—Hoyle on verse — a sonnet must have fourteen lines. That shows you how much Hoyle knows.

Pin your faith on some other guy
If Harvard fails to demolish Chi.

Forward my mail to Singapore
If Calif. wins the game from Ore.
If Chattanooga beats Tennessee,

A thing like this is just as easy as rolling onto a log:

Take Illinois if you care to, chum,
But the bankroll over at our house
Goes (the whole colossal sum)
On U. S. C. and her powerhouse.

The upset special: Duke will take
A pretty good shellacking;
Hey, Pittsburgh, don't for Pete's sake,
Forget you've got my ($1) backing.

Georgetown's team will cook the goose
Of the luckless boys from Syracuse.

The odds are short, but it's dough in your purse, sir—
Bet Alabama to trample on Mercer.

The U. S. Army's undermanned;
They're sad at old West Point;
Columbia is is coming, and
She's apt to wreck the joint.

For that matter, Tennyson used to fumble now and then himself. Remember "I come from haunts of coot and hern"? "Hern" instead of "heron." He was certainly reaching for that one.

Northwestern, at some later date,
Will win; but not from Ohio State.

Texas is tough, but put your stake on
Oklahoma to cop the bacon.

The loyal sons of Arkansas
(The Razorbacks to you)
Will never fail her; they'll murder Baylor
By pretty nearly a point or two.

Penn will be Eli Yale's undoing.
If you want your money back try suing
Iowa's team is coming along.
But Michigan looks a bit too strong.

S. M. U. will probably fail
To beat old Notre Dame up;
But if the Texans prevail,
Keep cool, boys. Don't yell "frame-up!"

And then we wrote:
Minnesota is good and strong.
But you can't pooh-pooh Purdue;
I'll take the latter, and if I'm wrong,
It could have happened to you.

Go out and bet your family plate
On Washington over Washington State.

Bet the Princetons buy your dinner;
Bet Cornell the success winner.
At the end of a duel of violet and blue,
Of passing and punting and kicking,
North Carolina will beat NYU.
It's a long way to go for a licking.

And finally, just to show you what rats we poets are in our hearts:

Pickle as a two-bit weathervane,
I quit on Fordham, and I pick Tulane.

Ivy League, Big Ten and Coast In Grid Spotlight

By BILL BONI

New York, Oct. 12 (AP)—While the members of the Southeast and Southwest Conferences again will be concentrating on intersectional warfare, in which they won such standout honors a week ago, the emphasis will be on intro-conferences games Saturday in the Eastern Ivy League, the Big Ten and the Pacific Coast conference.

The Big Ten and the Ivy League rarely have presented such promising programs on the same day.

In the mid-west, as counter-attractions to Notre Dame's clash with Southern Methodist, the Western Conference will offer games between Michigan and Iowa, Northwestern and Ohio State, Indiana and Wisconsin and Minnesota and Purdue.

At least one of the Texas in each of these games is conceded a chance at winning the Big Ten title.

Cornell at Princeton

Top attraction on the Eastern Ivy League slate is Cornell's invasion of Princeton.

Off the score, the Big Red was impressive in starting out with a 19-6 victory over Syracuse. But close observers, while crediting Coach Carl Snavely with having built a fine line, rated the Cornell offensive as pretty much of an "Off-and-on" proposition. Princeton, on the other hand, boomed as the best "Big Three" prospect, showed little more than passing strength (the name is Dave Allerdice) against Williams.

Right back of this game in point of attractiveness comes Yale's stand against Pennsylvania which, with Princeton, is expected to give Cornell the run for Ivy League first money. Dartmouth and Columbia, other Ivy charter members, meanwhile will be giving Navy and Army their first tests against accredited football powers.

On the coast, where the intersectional headliner will be Southern California-Illinois, sectional attention will be directed chiefly to California's attempt to get out of a two-defeat slump against Oregon, and U. C. L. A.'s try for its third straight triumph, this time over Standford.

Other Games

Conference activity otherwise will be sporadic.

Only Auburn-Mississippi State is booked in the southeast circuit, which had Florida meeting Boston College today and Saturday will have Tulane making its stand against Fordham, Georgia against embittered Holy Cross, and Louisiana State against Rice.

Lone Southwest Conference game will be Baylor-Arkansas, with Texas Christian, Texas Aggie, S. M. U. and Rice tackling intersectional foes in Temple, Villanova, Notre Dame and L. S. U.; Iowa State-Nebraska is the only Big Six game on tap, and the Southern Conference will present N. C. State-Wake Forest, V. P.—William and Mary, and Furman-the Citadel.

This league's two leaders, Duke and North Carolina, will be engaged intersectionally against Pitt and New York U., respectively. That Pitt-Duke affairs should be one of the games of the day.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Oct. 12 (AP) — The National League, suffering from cramps in the vicinity of its prestige, may have acquired an antidote for that American League poison in the signing of Frankie Frisch as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

There has been some criticism of the docile attitude of the Cincinnati Reds in the recent world series; that they went on the field filled with awe for the Yankees instead of muttering: "Aw, the Yanks."

There may have been a certain defeatist attitude. We couldn't say, and if there was, we wouldn't blame Deacon Bill McKechnie, who did a grand job of holding the team together in the stretch run.

Frisch never has been a man to get a hollow stomach and folding legs in the presence of any man or group of men. He was trained in the old John McGraw school, which had as its main course a study of the various methods of expressing contempt for any and all opposition.

He managed the last National League team to win a world championship—his 1934 Cardinals defeated Detroit four games to three.

He has been in eight world series —four with the Giants and four with the Cards—and came out with a 50-50 record.

A manager isn't a ball team, but sometimes he can imbue his players with a little of his own fire and brimstone. Nobody ever accused Frisch's Cardinals of playing pattycake baseball.

Naturally the new Pirate boss must take care of the little detail of winning a National League pennant before he can march up to the Yankees (that's taken for granted) with a chip on his shoulder. That's not going to be so easy, considering that the Pirates finished this year marching very bravely on their shoulderblades.

And if Frisch doesn't eventually do it, it may be the other half of the Brooklyn-Pittsburgh axis that does, and Brooklyn is managed by another hot potato who wouldn't know an inferiority complex from a dish of spinach.

Leo Durocher, who led the amazing Dodgers out of the second-division wilderness in his first year as pilot, played on Frisch's 1934 Cardinals, and his fiery leadership unquestionably had much to do with Brooklyn's success this year. In fact, more than a few critics believe that had the Dodgers a little more luck with pitchers they, and not the Reds, would have been the party of the second part in the series.

Challedon Rated Top Three Year Old of '3

Maryland Horse Also Leads Money Winners of Year

"Big Pete" Went On to Fresh Triumphs as Others Folded Up

Outbreak of War Prevented Trip Overseas for Ascot Gold Cup

By SID FEDER

New York, Oct. 12 (AP)—Simply because there's nothing wrong with him that a bag of oats won't cure, Challedon now stands as the undisputed king of the three-year-old racing world.

The war ruined Challedon's chances for a trip to England this fall and a try at the Ascot Gold cup next spring. As a result, Challenger's big boy will take his chances in the Pimlico Special, November 1, against the only other horse to challenge his right to the top sport for 1939, Charles S. Howard's South American bred Kayak II. Three other rhorses are slated to go postward in the $10,000 "winner-take-all event," but a victory for one of this trio would go down as the year's No. 1 upset.

Others Faded

For a long time this year, it was all Johnstown on the three-year-old throne. Although he was defeated by Challendon in the mud of the Preakness, "Big John," off his Kentucky Derby and Dwyer and Belmont stakes triumphs was Mr. Big. And, in sound condition and on a fast track, his great speed probably could give all of them a run for it.

Howere, he developed the wheezes an had to be retired for keeps. Eighty-Thirty, the later-developing three-year-old, came up with trouble when his legs filled and he was assigned to the farm for the year.

Meantime, Challendon kept right on going.

Challedon Rated Top Three Year Old of '39

Maryland Horse Also Leads Money Winners of Year

"Big Pete" Went On to Fresh Triumphs as Others Folded Up

Outbreak of War Prevented Trip Overseas for Ascot Gold Cup

By SID FEDER

New York, Oct. 12 (AP)—Simply because there's nothing wrong with him that a bag of oats won't cure, Challedon now stands as the undisputed king of the three-year-old racing world.

The war ruined Challedon's chances for a trip to England this fall and a try at the Ascot Gold cup next spring. As a result, Challenger's big boy will take his chances in the Pimlico Special, November 1, against the only other horse to challenge his right to the top sport for 1939, Charles S. Howard's South American bred Kayak II. Three other rhorses are slated to go postward in the $10,000 "winner-take-all event," but a victory for one of this trio would go down as the year's No. 1 upset.

Others Faded

For a long time this year, it was all Johnstown on the three-year-old throne. Although he was defeated by Challendon in the mud of the Preakness, "Big John," off his Kentucky Derby and Dwyer and Belmont stakes triumphs was Mr. Big. And, in sound condition and on a fast track, his great speed probably could give all of them a run for it.

Howere, he developed the wheezes an had to be retired for keeps. Eighty-Thirty, the later-developing three-year-old, came up with trouble when his legs filled and he was assigned to the farm for the year.

Meantime, Challendon kept right on going.

Isolator To Run In Special After Win at Jamaica

Woodward Racer Takes Gallant Fox 'Cap--Howard Has Two

Baltimore, Oct. 12 (AP) — William Woodward's Isolator accepted a challenge today to race against an all-star field in the Pimlico Special November 1. It was the first formal acceptance from the owners of the seven horses invited for the $10,000 winner-take-all event.

Isolator is not at Jamaica, where he won the $10,000-added Gallant Fox handicap today.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 12 — Charles S. Howard today accepted the Maryland Jockey Club's invitation to run his 4-year-old Kayak II in the forthcoming Pimlico Special.

"Barring unforeseen mishaps, Kayak is a sure starter in the special race," he said.

When asked if Sorteado, Kayak's stablemate, would run in the $15,000-added Washington Handicap, mile-and-a-quarter closing-day feature here October 28, Howard said, "Yes, he will start. The entire stable will be shipped to Pimlico in about twelve days and he will van there for the engagement.

So Next Time They'll Fly

Kansas City, Mo. (AP)—L. G. Montray, railroad fireman, and J. H. Jamison, locomotive engineer, decided to take a vacation with their wives in Minnesota. To get away from trains and railroads they went by automobile. In a fog in Minnesota their car collided with a freight train. Nobody was hurt.

Series for Softball Title Declared Off

The series for the softball championship of Cumberland, which ended in a three-way tie between Trozzo's Whirlwinds, champions of the Allegany County League; North End Merchants, winners in the East Side League, and Post's Pirates of the South End League, will not be finished, it was decided at a meeting last night at the Central Y. M. C. A.

This action was taken after the Whirlwinds and Merchants battled to a deadlock in what was to have been the first game in the playoff of the triple tie.. This contest, marred by constant disputes, was called on account of darkness by Umpire Poe. The Merchants who were leading 4-0 had charged the Whirlwinds with "stalling". The Pirates had been scheduled to meet the Trozzo-North End winner for the title.

The series receipts will be split three ways and each club will take possession of a trophy. In the draw for trophies, the Pirates got first choice and the Merchants second.

It is likely that Post's and the Merchants, who split in four past games this season, will meet in another contest to decide the winner of the series.

Armstrong Worried By Signs of Zodiac

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 12. — Henry Armstrong, who has learned from the stars that Friday is apt to be a sad day for him, risks his welterweight boxing championship tomorrow night—on Friday the 13th.

Homicide Henry is matched with Challenger Howard Scott of Washington, D. C., who worries him less than the sign of the zodiac. Armstrong retains all the pet superstitions he picked up as a shoe shine boy in St. Louis just a few years back.

"Come to think of it", he grinned, "it'll be just as unlucky for him as me".

All the horseshoes, evil-eyes, and four-leaf clovers in Minneapolis couldn't make Scott less than a 20-to-1 shot in the eyes of local odds-makers.

Lon Stiner

Bringing a hopeless tail-end football team up to third place in the final Pacific Coast conference standings last year, A. L. (Lon) Stiner, head coach at Oregon State college, accomplished a job which would have done credit to a veteran coach.

As a result, Stiner, who has been head coach at Oregon State since 1933, received a three-year contract and a raise in salary.

Born at Hastings, Neb., Stiner attended the public schools and participated in all sports in high school. He played his first college football at Lombard college in 1924.

Began at Colorado

In 1925 Stiner transferred to Nebraska, where he was firststring tackle in 1925-26.

Stiner's first coaching job was at the University of Colorado. He served as assistant there in 1927. He came to Oregon State the next year as assistant in football and as head track coach.

Stiner's teams have won 11 games, lost 19 and tied six others against conference opponents.

His offense features the single wingback and short punt formation. His teams always have been spectacular passing units and opponents can testify to their yearly defense strength.

Texas Turns Out Star Footballers

Fort Wodth, Oct. 12—Texas, noted for star golfers, also claims to have developed more first-class football players in the last decade than any other state.

Sammy Baugh and Darrell Lester of Texas Christian, Pest Welch and Cecil Isbell of Purdue, Monk Meyer of Army, Bobby Wilson of Southern Methodist, Bohn Hilliard of Texas and Dick Todd of Texas A. and M. are some of the best.

Last year the state contributed Davey O'Brien, Ki Aldrich and Insull B. Hale of Texas Christian and Billy Patterson of Baylor to the front rank.

Catamounts' Coach To Use Lighter Boys

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 12.—For the third consecutive day, Coach Dana Lough yesterday divided his Potomac State football squad into heavy and light teams and the boys with less weight turned in their second victory by a 12-0 margin.

As a result, the Catamount mentor plans to select most of his starting lineup for the locals game with Shepherd College at Shepherdstown Saturday from the lighter squad. Standouts yesterday were Crittenden, O'Neil and Kight on the offense and McCullough on the defense.

Hawkins, regular left end, was injured and will be on the sidelines. Coach Lough will send his boys through tapering-off drills today before naming the starting lineup.

The Catamounts have lost three straight games to Waynesburg, Mt. St. Mary's and Concord. Seeking their first victory, the local squad will be in excellent physical condition.

Frostburg Booters Prepare for Clash

Frostburg, Oct. 12.—Coach George Carrington and his squad of 15 will embark for New Windsor Saturday morning in quest of Frostburg State's first soccer victory of the season.

The clash with Blue Ridge College will be a Maryland Collegiate League contest and Frostburg must win to stay in the running. Although defeated last week by Towson, 1-0, Carrington was pleased with the fight put up by the locals.

The only glaring weakness seemed to be the offense and efforts have been made this week to bring about a correction. Hal Conrad, former Beall High ace, will return to his regular place at center forward while Bill Thomas will be shifted to right wing.

Joe Wagner is still on the inactive list due to a cold which is keeping him from practice sessions. Johnny Meyers, steller defensive back, is a doubtful starter due to a leg injury received several weeks ago.

The two freshmen on the squad, Gail Litton, former Hancock High booter, and Bill Merriman, ex-Barton player, turned in excellent games against Towson. With a new athletic setup at Blue Ridge, it is expected that the New Windsor institution will be represented by improved teams hereafter.

The only glaring weakness seemed to be the offense and efforts have been made this week to bring about a correction. Hal Conrad, former Beall High ace, will return to his regular place at center forward while Bill Thomas will be shifted to right wing.

Joe Wagner is still on the inactive list due to a cold which is keeping him from practice sessions. Johnny Meyers, steller defensive back, is a doubtful starter due to a leg injury received several weeks ago.

The two freshmen on the squad, Gail Litton, former Hancock High booter, and Bill Merriman, ex-Barton player, turned in excellent games against Towson. With a new athletic setup at Blue Ridge, it is expected that the New Windsor institution will be represented by improved teams hereafter.

LaSalle Plays Calvert Hall Here Tonig

Baltimore Team Has Not Won But Has Experience

Seven Lettermen on Squad of Baltimore School's Eleven

Fort Hill-Keyser and AHS at Hagerstown Games on Tomorrow

Football squads representing Cumberland and Baltimore will clash at 8 o'clock this evening in the Fort Hill Stadium where LaSalle High will be host to a favored Calvert Hall High School eleven. It is the only meeting of teams from the Monumental City and Cumberland this year.

Neither team has won a game this season with LaSalle dropping three straight and Calvert Hall tying one and losing another. The North Enders, downed 18-0 by the Cardinals in 1938, have lost to Ridgeley 26-6, Altoona Catholic 21-0 and St. Mary's of Clarksburg 7-0. The Baltimoreans tied Friends School of Baltimore 6-6 and bowed to Southern High of Baltimore 12-7.

Calvert Hall has been working out since August 28. The original squad of 65 was first cut to 50 and later to 26. Although the Cards have dropped one game and split even in another, Coach Ray Bahr is far from discouraged.

Has Several Vets

Graduation did not hit Calvert too hard, the current squad including seven lettermen. Jerry Feeley, end; Fred Schanberger and Owings Moconaghy, tackles; Babe Schwalenberg and Larry Moller, guards, and Dick Knight and Charles Connolly, backs, are the veterans from last season.

Bahr has been pleased with the work of the line which strikes an average of 165 pounds. The tackles Schanberger and Maconaghy are hefty lads, the latter weighing 260 pounds.

Knight and Connolly are good passers while Schwalenberg is a veteran kicker. The tie score against Friends came as an upset to Calvert while Southern was forced to come from behind to defeat the Cards in a Maryland Scholastic Association A Conference battle.

Cumberland's other two scholastic aggregations will go into action Saturday with Allegany opening its Cumberland Valley Athletic League defense against Hagerstown in the Hub City in the afternoon and Fort Hill's Sentinels opposing the Keyser High Golden Tornado in the local bowl at night.

Clash for Conference Lead

West Virginia schools also will be busy this afternoon with three Potomac Valley Conference skirmishes on the program. Thomas and Parsons, each unbeaten in the conference, will clash for the lead at Parsons. Moorefield will invade Piedmont and Romney will play at Franklin. Thomas has copped three straight loop engagements and Parsons two in a row. Last year, Parsons topped Thomas 6-0, Moorefield and Piedmont battled to a scoreless tie and Franklin whipped Romney 27-0.

It will be the sixth time Parsons and Thomas have clashed since Myrl Kepner went a Parsons as coach and the Panthers have won four of the tilts. Last year at Thomas, a free-for-all marked the contest. Officials will be Merritt Wilson, Jr., referee; Pike, umpire, and Collett, head linesman.

In other contests due today, Berkeley Springs will play St. Mary's at Hagerstown, Ridgeley will go to Hyndman and Handley of Winchester, Va., will be host to Harrisonburg. In 1938, Berkeley trimmed St. Mary's 44-0, Ridgeley topped Hyndman 12-6 and Handley edged out Harrisonburg 19-7.

Two other games of local interest are on Saturday's slate. Potomac State's Catamounts, seeking their first victory of the season, will go against Shepherd's Rams at Shepherdstown, and the Petersburg Vikings and Charles Town Panthers will meet at Charles Town.

Beall Hi Booters Trim Grantsville

Grantsville, Oct. 12—Eddie Finzel's Beall High soccer team of Frostburg came here yesterday and handed Grantsville a 5-0 setback in a return tussle. Blair and Chaney accounted for Beall's two field goals in the second quarter while Bill Prichard added a penalty goal in the third heat. The lineups:

Pos.	BEALL	GRANTSVILLE
G	Dyer	Polk
RFB	R. Harvey	Edwards
LFB	L. Middleton	Durst
RHB	Bittner	Schaefer
CHB	Blair	Keller
LHB	Jackson	Patton

IR	A. Harvey	Croft
CF	Prichard	Bailey
IL	Bittinger	Lewis

Substitutes: Beall—Brode, Wilson, Crowe, Knierim, Lewis, Scarpelli, Day and R. Middleton.

Field goals—Blair and Chaney.
Penalty goal—Prichard.

Biggest Break

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 12—Harry Craft, Reds' outfielder, never played baseball until he entered the University of Mississippi where the coach told him to report in order to keep in shape for football.

The Sportlight By Grantland Rice

THE ROUND-UP

New York, Oct. 12—Duke-Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh. Two of the tops—Blue Devil and Panther. Duke has the better defense with a typical Wallace Wade line. A line unscored upon last fall up to the Rose Bowl game. Pitt has Cassiano and a better passing attack. A double test. Just an edge for Duke.

Purdue-Minnesota at Minneapolis. One of the big games of the Big Ten round-up. As close to 50-50 as you can get. An edge for Purdue and George Ade if Brock is right and ready to go.

Tulane-Fordham at New Orleans. One of the feature intersectional battles of the year. Two of the country's best teams. Fordham needed the Alabama game badly. Tulane has the better line—Fordham the better running backs. Fordham needs far better passing than it has shown. A nod to Tulane.

Cornell - Princeton at Princeton. One of the Ivy League features. Princeton's main hope is Allerdice, a high-class passer. Cornell has the bulge in man power and running attack. Cornell.

Army-Columbia at New York. Columbia should improve over its first showing against Yale. Close to an even game, with a good Army team having the better chance.

Yale-Pennsylvania at New Haven. Yale got away to a neat start against Columbia but will meet more man power against Pennsylvania. Another close game, with the Red and Blue favored over the Blue.

Notre Dame-S.M.U. at South Bend. Notre Dame's third hard game in three starts. S.M.U. was good enough to tie Oklahoma, the team that wrecked Northwestern. A slight edge for Notre Dame with a fine flock of good backs.

Dartmouth-Navy at Baltimore. The first time the blanket will be lifted from Dartmouth. A hard game to figure in Dartmouth's first real test. Navy had a hard day against Virginia, an improving team. You can label this one a draw.

Northwestern-Ohio State at Columbus. A 75,000 attendance battle. Northwestern is far better than Waldorf's team looked last week. Ohio State is above last year. Frankly a guess, with Northwestern favored to come back, play better football and win.

Michigan-Iowa at Ann Arbor. An 80,000, or better, attendance turnout. Eddie Anderson's Iowa team started briskly by scoring 32 points against Indiana's 29. Indicating a much stronger attack ahtn defense. Iowa has a great back in Kinnick, an outstanding star. Michigan has four fine backs in Kromer, Harmon, Evashevski and Westfall. Michigan has a star center in Kodros. Michgan gets the call.

North Carolina-N.Y.U. at Chapel Hill. Two good teams with Stirnweiss and Lalanne thrown against Boell. A wide open game, a good one to watch. North Carolina is the pick.

Syracuse - Georgetown at Syracuse. They don't get any easier to pick. This is another toss-up. There is no choice.

Southern Cal.-Illinois at Los Angeles. Southern California has ten men to Zuppke's one. The westerners have all the man power, most of the speed and most of the experience. Illinois has only a faint outside chance. Southern California is two touchdowns better.

Harvard-Chicago at Chicago. An almost certain win for Dick Harlow's Crimson invaders who are not going too badly at all this fall.

L.S.U.-Rice at Baton Rouge. One of the big games of the South. Rice has a great back in Cordill—L.S.U. a star end in Kennieth Kavanaugh. The lift that L.S.U. drew from the Holy Cross game should bring her safely through.

Oklahoma-Texas at Dallas. One of the main shows of the Southwest. The two teams ran up 40 points against Northwestern and Wisconsin. Oklahoma has the ball.

I like Oregon over California—Kansas over Colorado State—Nebraska over Iowa State—Mississippi over Centenary—a good Missouri team above Washington—Utah over Brigham Young—Indiana a shade beyond Wisconsin—Texas A. and M. in a fine show against Villanova, two of the best teams of the season, with Texas A. and M. favored by a breath—Holy Cross should handle Georgia. Brown has a hard game with Colgate but should just about get by. Texas Christian tonight should move back into the winning column against a good Temple team. I like Arkansas over Baylor in another close affair.

Dempsey Ridicules 1939 Heavyweights

Philadelphia, Oct. 12. — With the exception of Champion Joe Louis, present day heavyweights are "a lot of third raters that wouldn't have been good enough for sparring partners 20 years ago," according to Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion.

Dempsey, who arrived in Philadelphia to appear at a department store, ridiculed the new fighters as "just a joke."

The former champion said he would have fought Louis the only way he knew how, "throw punches and keep throwing punches."

"I think maybe I could take it a little better than he can," Dempsey said. "The first man who landed solidly would win."

Conference Games Top Pa. Schedule This Week

Outstanding conference games which promise to affect 1939 championship races highlight the halfway mark of Pennsylvania's schoolboy football campaign this weekend.

Set off by last night's Somerset-Conemaugh contest, the week-end program sends most of the leading contenders for conference titles into action against their strongest rivals thus far, while other top teams of the various circuits go outside their own leagues for stiff non-conference competition.

Both Windber and Lewistown, ranked one-third in the western Pennsylvania conference, are listed for independent action. Focussing chief conference interest on tonight's (Friday) Ferndale-Portage and Clearfield-Philipsburg contests. Defending champion Ferndale, facing the necessity of winning to remain in the title race, will be facing a strong Portage eleven on the rebound after last week's setback.

At the hands of Windber while Clearfield, undefeated in five starts including three in cinference play, can improve its present third place position if it gets by its neighboring Philipsburg rival.

Windber faces North Braddock Scott at Windber while Lewistown is host to Pittsburgh South in two of Saturday's leading non-conference games.

AHS Junior Varsity To Meet Fort Hill

Junior varsity football squads representing Allegany and Fort Hill High Schools will clash in the first of two games this season this afternoon at 4 o'clock at Campobello.

Featured by three long touchdown runs, the Campers opened the three-school series for the city junior varsity championship with a 34-7 victory over LaSalle's jayvees last Friday.

Coach Walter Bowers is expected to start his same Blue and White lineup while Coach Leon Dissinger of Fort Hill has not definitely decided on his starting array.

The Sentinels are captained by Tackle Neil Arthur. Others on the squad follow:

Ends, Pete Bageant, John Gilpin and Fred Davis; tackles, Bob Neupert, Jim Sheetz, Harold Crawford and Troutman; centers, Obie Calhoun, Paul Whitford and Frank McCreary; guards, Herman Brant, Merle Orndorff, Tom Bryant and Orville Lucas; halfbacks, John McFarland, Joe Dombosky, Harold Goodman, George Evans and Billy Price; quarterbacks, Robert Welsh and Jim Wilkins, and fullback, Bill Hixenbaugh.

Next Friday, Fort Hill will play its first home engagement against LaSalle.

Two Carnegie Tech Gridders Injured

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12. —Because of injuries, Chris Moersch, regular quarterback, and Karl Striegel, veteran left end, will not play with Carnegie Tech against Case at Cleveland Saturday. Harold (Chang) Dunn, former center and guard, will take over at quarterback, while Striegel's post probably will be filled by Bob Church, right end.

Tough on Table Tennis

London, Oct. 12—European table tennis has been hard hit by the war. Most of the tables, paddles and balls were imported from England, France and what formerly was Czechoslovakia.

Rugby Tougher Than Football-Berwanger

Chicago, Oct. 12—Jay Berwanger, former Chicago All-America whose Rubgy team played for the national title this year, says the sport is considerably rougher and more exacting than football.

"Players are dressed in jerseys, shorts and are not allowed to wear protecting padding of any kind," he points out. "There's a greater demand on physical powers because of its roughness and continued action."

Pitcher Gains Two Wins on Two Tosses

Milwaukee, Oct. 12. — George Blaeholder, former major league pitching star, won two successive games as a relief hurler for the Milwaukee Brewers this season on two pitched balls. In one, his only pitch resulted in a double play; the other was an easy infield out.

Yale-Pennsylvania at New Haven. Yale got away to a neat start against Columbia but will meet more man power against Pennsylvania. Another close game, with the Red and Blue favored over the Blue.

Notre Dame-S.M.U. at South Bend. Notre Dame's third hard game in three starts. S.M.U. was good enough to tie Oklahoma, the team that wrecked Northwestern. A slight edge for Notre Dame with a fine flock of good backs.

Dartmouth-Navy at Baltimore. The first time the blanket will be lifted from Dartmouth. A hard game to figure in Dartmouth's first real test. Navy had a hard day against Virginia, an improving team. You can label this one a draw.

Northwestern-Ohio State at Columbus. A 75,000 attendance battle. Northwestern is far better than Waldorf's team looked last week. Ohio State is above last year. Frankly a guess, with Northwestern favored to come back, play better football and win.

Michigan-Iowa at Ann Arbor. An 80,000 or better attendance turnout. Eddie Anderson's Iowa team started briskly by scoring 32 points against Indiana's 29. Indicating a much stronger attack ahtn defense Iowa has a great back in Kinnick, an outstanding star. Michigan has four fine backs in Kromer, Harmon, Evashevski and Westfall. Michigan has a star center in Kodros. Michigan gets the call.

North Carolina-N.Y.U. at Chapel Hill. Two good teams with Stirnweiss and Lalanne thrown against Boell. A wide open game, a good one to watch. North Carolina is the pick.

Syracuse - Georgetown at Syracuse. They don't get any easier to pick. This is another toss-up. There is no choice.

Southern Cal.-Illinois at Los Angeles. Southern California has ten men to Zuppke's one. The westerners have all the man power, most of the speed and most of the experience. Illinois has only a faint outside chance. Southern California is two touchdowns better.

Harvard-Chicago at Chicago. An almost certain win for Dick Harlow's Crimson invaders who are not going too badly at all this fall.

L.S.U.-Rice at Baton Rouge. One of the big games of the South. Rice has a great back in Cordill—L.S.U. a star end in Kenneth Kavanaugh. The lift that L.S.U. drew from the Holy Cross game should bring her safely through.

Oklahoma-Texas at Dallas. One of the main shows of the Southwest. The two teams ran up 40 points against Northwestern and Wisconsin. Oklahoma has the ball.

I like Oregon over California—Kansas over Colorado State—Nebraska over Iowa State—Mississippi over Centenary—a good Missouri team above Washington—Utah over Brigham Young—Indiana a shade beyond Wisconsin—Texas A. and M. in a fine show against Villanova, two of the best teams of the season, with Texas A. and M. favored by a breath—Holy Cross should handle Georgia. Brown has a hard game with Colgate but should just about get by. Texas Christian tonight should move back into the winning column against a good Temple team. I like Arkansas over Baylor in another close affair.

Dempsey Ridicules 1939 Heavyweights

Philadelphia, Oct. 12. — With the exception of Champion Joe Louis, present day heavyweights are "a lot of third raters that wouldn't have been good enough for sparring partners 20 years ago," according to Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion.

Dempsey, who arrived in Philadelphia to appear at a department store, ridiculed the new fighters as "just a joke."

The former champion said he would have fought Louis the only way he knew how, "throw punches and keep throwing punches."

"I think maybe I could take it a little better than he can," Dempsey said. "The first man who landed solidly would win."

Conference Games Top Pa. Schedule This Week

Outstanding conference games which promise to affect 1939 championship races highlight the halfway mark of Pennsylvania's schoolboy football campaign this weekend.

Set off by last night's Somerset-Conemaugh contest, the week-end program sends most of the leading contenders for conference titles into action against their strongest rivals thus far, while other top teams of the various circuits go outside their own leagues for stiff non-conference competition.

Both Windber and Lewistown, ranked one-third in the western Pennsylvania conference, are listed for independent action. Focussing chief conference interest on tonight's (Friday) Ferndale-Portage and Clearfield-Philipsburg contests. Defending champion Ferndale, facing the necessity of winning to remain in the title race, will be facing a strong Portage eleven on the rebound after last week's setback.

At the hands of Windber while Clearfield, undefeated in five starts including three in cinference play, can improve its present third place position if it gets by its neighboring Philipsburg rival.

Windber faces North Braddock Scott at Windber while Lewistown is host to Pittsburgh South in two of Saturday's leading non-conference games.

AHS Junior Varsity To Meet Fort Hill

Junior varsity football squads representing Allegany and Fort Hill High Schools will clash in the first of two games this season this afternoon at 4 o'clock at Campobello.

Featured by three long touchdown runs, the Campers opened the three-school series for the city junior varsity championship with a 34-7 victory over LaSalle's jayvees last Friday.

Coach Walter Bowers is expected to start his same Blue and White lineup while Coach Leon Dissinger of Fort Hill has not definitely decided on his starting array.

The Sentinels are captained by Tackle Neil Arthur. Others on the squad follow:

Ends, Pete Bageant, John Gilpin and Fred Davis; tackles, Bob Neupert, Jim Sheetz, Harold Crawford and Troutman; centers, Obie Calhoun, Paul Whitford and Frank McCreary; guards, Herman Brant, Merle Orndorff, Tom Bryant and Orville Lucas; halfbacks, John McFarland, Joe Dombosky, Harold Goodman, George Evans and Billy Price; quarterbacks, Robert Welsh and Jim Wilkins, and fullback, Bill Hixenbaugh.

Next Friday, Fort Hill will play its first home engagement against LaSalle.

Two Carnegie Tech Gridders Injured

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12. —Because of injuries, Chris Moersch, regular quarterback, and Karl Striegel, veteran left end, will not play with Carnegie Tech against Case at Cleveland Saturday. Harold (Chang) Dunn, former center and guard, will take over at quarterback, while Striegel's post probably will be filled by Bob Church, right end.

Tough on Table Tennis

London, Oct. 12—European table tennis has been hard hit by the war. Most of the tables, paddles and balls were imported from England, France and what formerly was Czechoslovakia.

Rugby Tougher Than Football-Berwanger

Chicago, Oct. 12—Jay Berwanger, former Chicago All-America whose Rubgy team played for the national title this year, says the sport is considerably rougher and more exacting than football.

"Players are dressed in jerseys, shorts and are not allowed to wear protecting padding of any kind," he points out. "There's a greater demand on physical powers because of its roughness and continued action."

Pitcher Gains Two Wins on Two Tosses

Milwaukee, Oct. 12. — George Blaeholder, former major league pitching star, won two successive games as a relief hurler for the Milwaukee Brewers this season on two pitched balls. In one, his only pitch resulted in a double play; the other was an easy infield out.

MacPhail Replies To Crack About Dodgers

New York, Oct. 12. — Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn president, picked up a paper which somehow had left the Giants out of the National League standings. He rushed it to Eddie Brannick Giants' secretary with the notation:

"Seems as though the Giants are no longer in the league; I only know what I read in the papers."

Movie Landmarks Seen on Screen

Film fans will heave a nostalgic sigh or two as famous Hollywood landmarks flash across the screen in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Hollywood Cavalcade," the romance of moviedom from bathing beauties to world premieres, staged anew and photographed in Technicolor, which stars Alice Faye and Don Ameche at the Strand Theater starting tomorrow at ten a. m.

Prominent among them is Grauman's Egyptian Theater, Hollywood's famous show palace of the silent film days. The lone sentry who used to parade back and forth across the roof marches again.

Other celebrated locales used in the 20th CenturyFox picture are the Criterian Theater, where Al Jolson again electrifies the world with his singing of "Kol Nidre" in the first talkie, "The Jazz Singer"; the Ambassador Hotel's Cocoanut Grove, long famous as the rendezvous for movie luminaries; the beach at Santa Monica, where Mack Sennett filmed his famous bathing beauties and where they once again stroll by the familiar Castle Rock, this time with lovely blonde Alice Faye among their number.

Special Stage Show At Strand Today

Today only, the Strand Theatre has secured a special stage attraction, Armida and her "Flying Down to Rio Revue."

The star of the show is the diminutive Spitfire Armida, who offers a parade of dance and song hits in the manner made popular by Isa Miranda, star of the Broadway musical, "Streets of Paris."

In a colorful spectacle number "Argentine Fiesta" the dainty danseuse presents a fast moving version of the latest, half-crooning, half-rythmatic style of song presentation that will set everyones toes a tappin'.

A score of dark-eyed beauties from South America carry out a varied program of dances ranging all the way from the popular "South American Sway" to the liveliest of tap dances.

Music for the occasion comes from "The South American Guachos" a group who combine the fast stepping tempos of the rhumba with the smooth swing of the American Fox Trot.

The entire production is elaborately mounted and lavishly costumed and moves at a rapid pace through an hour of dance song and laughter in the hands of a capable crew of entertainers.

On the screen is Jean Parker, Phil Regan and Benny Baker in the hilarious musical comedy "She Married A Cop."

Wayne Had Exciting Career on Road to Fame

The son of a Winterset, Iowa, drug-store proprietor, John Wayne wanted to be a doctor in early age, studied a teacher's course in college, almost followed a professional football career when he won All-American tackle honors for Southern California's football team, and ended up a motion picture star.

Wayne's family moved to Lancaster, California, when he was a youth and there he learned ranching and cow-punching. Wayne worked in a motion picture studio property department to help pay his college expenses. He was spotted there by Raoul Walsh, the noted director, and placed in a western picture, "The Big Trail." That was in 1931.

When Bob Livingston was graduated to feature pictures, Republic Studios signed Wayne to take his place as Stony Brooke in the "Three Mesquiteers" series of westerns. Wayne makes his debut in this western group in "Pals of the Saddle," due today at the Garden Theatre.

Even when Mr. Moto takes a vacation, the famous Saturday Evening Post sleuth is still on the job.

Dreamlined Zorina an International Product

Her violet-blue eyes, liquid and clear and deep as a mountain pool, attract you at first. And then her smile, free, friendly and warm. Then you notice her complexion, peaches floating in a bowl of cream, and then her walk, her grace of movement, a figure that is perfection itself.

You talk with her and you are talking to a vivid, laughing, electric young person with a slight accent that can only be described as "international." There is a bit of Norway in it, some Oxford English, a touch of Russian, a bit of French, even a little Italian. The accent adds piquancy to this exotic personality who has flitted from gay place to gay place on two continents practically all of her life.

This beauty, who stars in the Warner Bros. musical production "On Your Toes," opening tomorrow at the Liberty Theatre, was born, by an accident of travel, in Berlin. She is Norwegian, her parents being natives of Kristiansund, an odd little community on the sea coast some 25 miles from Oslo. Kristiansund is spread over three small islands, without connecting bridges. To Zorina it is her "home town," and her mother is living there now.

Popular Screen Cowboy Stars in New Western

Gene Autry comes to the Embassy Theater today in a new musical western, "Colorado Sunset." But the title means little. The fact that Autry again graces a local screen usually means excellent screen entertainment, and this new Republic vehicle doesn't disappoint.

"Colorado Sunset" brings Gene into the midst of a milk war, and the excitement, thrills, and musical charm of all Autry films is present in abundance. Smiley Burnette lends comical presence as usual, and pretty June Storey again offers feminine inspiration to Gene's exploits.

The story, in brief, shows Gene and the Texas Troubadors, played by the Texas Rangers, hillbilly singing experts, buying a cattle ranch. Smiley, commissioned to make the purchase, buys a cow farm instead and the boys find themselves dairymen instead of cattle-punchers! To buck the unscrupulous protective association, the boys elect Gene as Sheriff and he eventually brings about fair play and just milk prices.

The second feature is Madge Evans and Preston Foster in the action drama, "Army Girl". In addition to the two features the third chapter of the serial "Mandrake, The Magician," starring Warren Hull, will be shown.

"Golden Boy" Smashes Way to Success

Unquestionably unique in treatment and in theme, Columbia's "Golden Boy" opened yesterday at the Maryland Theater to prove that Hollywood, when it wants to, can turn out definitely superior entertainment. The new film, directed by Rouben Mamoulian and starring Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou and William Holden, is based upon Clifford Odets' romantic drama.

"Golden Boy" tells of a young violinist, impatient and tired of working toward the day when he will be a success on the concert stage, who rapidly fights his way to the top in the prize-ring. In his swift climb to pugilistic stardom, he ruthlessly tramples upon the hopes of his music-loving father, ignores the cryings-out of his own conscience. He becomes brutalized by his new environment, until his love for a disillusioned young woman — the only person who really understands the tremendous conflict raging within him—causes him to give up the ring and return to the forgiveness of his family.

Under Rouben Mamoulian's direction, Odets' stage success becomes vibrant film material. "Golden Boy" is proof again that the affairs of everyday people is a fertile source of excitement on the screen.

West Virginia Teachers Get First Pension Checks

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 12 (AP)—The state ailed to fifty-six pensioned teachers today checks totaling about $7,000 as the first payment of retirement benefits by West Virginia.

David Kirby, secretary of the State Board of Education, said the checks covered the four months from July to October and ranged in amount from $20 to $42.20.

Kirby said a payment for three months will be made to the estate of J. D. Artrip of Huntington, a retired teacher who died last week.

May Save Hours

An hour spent now in rearranging the kitchen may save the homemaker many hours later.

If the garden chrysanthemums have not flowered before frost threatens to destroy them, they may be cut and kept inside in water and buds will develop nicely.

Rugs in constant use should be cleaned frequently and thoroughly. Any dust or dirt left in rugs for a long time is likely to cut the fibers, making holes.

Music for the occasion comes from "The South American Guachos" a group who combine the fast stepping tempos of the rhumba with the smooth swing of the American Fox Trot.

The entire production is elaborately mounted and lavishly costumed and moves at a rapid pace through an hour of dance song and laughter in the hands of a capable crew of entertainers.

On the screen is Jean Parker, Phil Regan and Benny Baker in the hilarious musical comedy "She Married A Cop."

Wayne Had Exciting Career on Road to Fame

The son of a Winterset, Iowa, drug-store proprietor, John Wayne wanted to be a doctor in early age, studied a teacher's course in college, almost followed a professional football career when he won All-American tackle honors for Southern California's football team, and ended up a motion picture star.

Wayne's family moved to Lancaster, California, when he was a youth and there he learned ranching and cow-punching. Wayne worked in a motion picture studio property department to help pay his college expenses. He was spotted there by Raoul Walsh, the noted director, and placed in a western picture, "The Big Trail." That was in 1931.

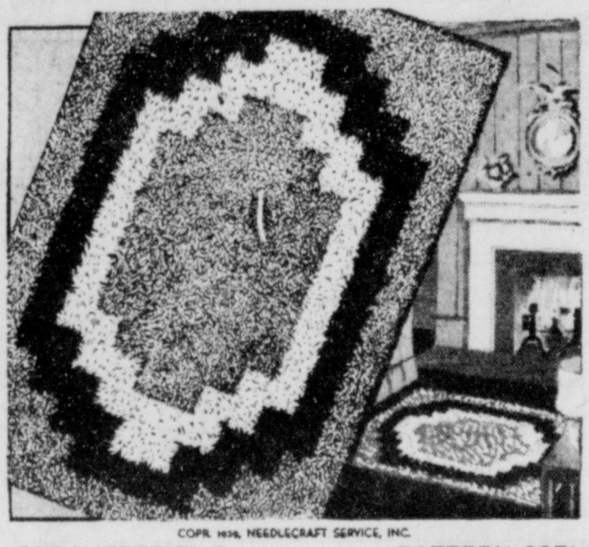

When Bob Livingston was graduated to feature pictures, Republic Studios signed Wayne to take his place as Stony Brooke in the "Three Mesquiteers" series of westerns. Wayne makes his debut in this western group in "Pals of the Saddle," due today at the Garden Theatre.

Dreamlined Zorina an International Product

Her violet-blue eyes, liquid and clear and deep as a mountain pool, attract you at first. And then her smile, free, friendly and warm. Then you notice her complexion, peaches floating in a bowl of cream, and then her walk, her grace of movement, a figure that is perfection itself.

You talk with her and you are talking to a vivid, laughing, electric young person with a slight accent that can only be described as "international." There is a bit of Norway in it, some Oxford English, a touch of Russian, a bit of French, even a little Italian. The accent adds piquancy to this exotic personality who has flitted from gay place to gay place on two continents practically all of her life.

This beauty, who stars in the Warner Bros. musical production "On Your Toes," opening tomorrow at the Liberty Theatre, was born, by an accident of travel, in Berlin. She is Norwegian, her parents being natives of Kristiansund, an odd little community on the sea coast some 25 miles from Oslo. Kristiansund is spread over three small islands, without connecting bridges. To Zorina it is her "home town," and her mother is living there now.

ROMANCE

Popular Screen Cowboy Stars in New Western

Gene Autry comes to the Embassy Theater today in a new musical western, "Colorado Sunset." But the title means little. The fact that Autry again graces a local screen usually means excellent screen entertainment, and this new Republic vehicle doesn't disappoint.

"Colorado Sunset", brings Gene into the midst of a milk war, and the excitement, thrills, and musical charm of all Autry films is present in abundance. Smiley Burnette lends comical presence as usual, and pretty June Storey again offers feminine inspiration to Gene's exploits.

The story, in brief, shows Gene and the Texas Troubadors, played by the Texas Rangers, hillbilly singing experts, buying a cattle ranch. Smiley, commissioned to make the purchase, buys a cow farm instead and the boys find themselves dairymen instead of cattle-punchers! To buck the unscrupulous protective association, the boys elect Gene as Sheriff and he evntually brings about fair play and just milk prices.

The second feature is Madge Evans and Preston Foster in the action drama, "Army Girl". In addition to the two features the third chapter of the serial "Mandrake, The Magician," starring Warren Hull, will be shown.

"Golden Boy" Smashes Way to Success

Unquestionably unique in treatment and in theme, Columbia's "Golden Boy" opened yesterday at the Maryland Theater to prove that Hollywood, when it wants to, can turn out definitely superior entertainment. The new film, directed by Rouben Mamoulian and starring Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou and William Holden, is based upon Clifford Odets' romantic drama.

"Golden Boy" tells of a young violinist, impatient and tired of working toward the day when he will be a success on the concert stage, who rapidly fights his way to the top in the prize-ring. In his swift climb to pugilistic stardom, he ruthlessly tramples upon the hopes of his music-loving father, ignores the cryings-out of his own conscience. He becomes brutalized by his new environment, until his love for a disillusioned young woman — the only person who really understands the tremendous conflict raging within him—causes him to give up the ring and return to the forgiveness of his family.

Under Rouben Mamoulian's direction, Odets' stage success becomes vibrant film material. "Golden Boy" is proof again that the affairs of everyday people is a fertile source of excitement on the screen.

West Virginia Teachers Get First Pension Checks

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 12 (AP)—The state ailed to fifty-six pensioned teachers today checks totaling about $7,000 as the first payment of retirement benefits by West Virginia.

David Kirby, secretary of the State Board of Education, said the checks covered the four months from July to October and ranged in amount from $20 to $42.20.

Kirby said a payment for three months will be made to the estate of J. D. Artrip of Huntington, a retired teacher who died last week.

May Save Hours

An hour spent now in rearranging the kitchen may save the homemaker many hours later.

If the garden chrysanthemums have not flowered before frost threatens to destroy them, they may be cut and kept inside in water and buds will develop nicely.

Rugs in constant use should be cleaned frequently and thoroughly. Any dust or dirt left in rugs for a long time is likely to cut the fibers, making holes.

The shades of 1914 are falling once more upon the world. Roads are choked with tanks and troops moving up to the "front." The banshee wail of air raid sirens sends civilians scurrying to shelter. Torpedoes streak their white feather of foam on the seas. Big guns roar. Again the nations of Europe are locked in a great conflict whose outcome no one can foretell. The biggest news story since "The War To End Wars" is unfolding.

Well informed Americans are making it a point to keep posted on the turbulent rush of events which are piecing out a grim new chapter of modern history. For an intelligent opinion, they want all the news—from the battlefields on land, the submarine zones at sea, from the warring capitals, the neighboring neutrals and the sensitive commodity markets of the world.

This newspaper is fully prepared to bring its readers that complete story. It is prepared because it is a member of The Associated Press, the world-wide news gathering organization which today maintains the largest and most experienced news staff ever assembled in Europe. There are more than 2,500 alert correspondents on that staff—many times more than the number of men assigned to report the World War for AP a quarter of a century ago.

Several outstanding members of this large, carefully coordinated news gathering army are pictured above. They represent only a few of the 110 American-trained newspaper men located in key spots to cover the news as it occurs and to direct the work of the far flung auxiliary force of resident correspondents and accredited reporters. Many of the men have had previous experience with modern war, some dating back to World War days.

All these men have only one job—to report the facts accurately, promptly and fully for 1,400 member newspapers from Maine to Key West, from New York to San Francisco, and to report those facts without sensational embellishment or wartime hysteria. The minute-by-minute reports of these correspondents are flashed into this newspaper's office day and night and our own staff hurries the dispatches to waiting presses for regular or extra editions, depending on the gravity of the news.

You will find the complete STORY of The Great War at your fingertips in this newspaper every day.

Torpedoes streak their white feather of foam on the seas. Big guns roar. Again the nations of Europe are locked in a great conflict whose outcome no one can foretell. The biggest news story since "The War To End Wars" is unfolding.

Well informed Americans are making it a point to keep posted on the turbulent rush of events which are piecing out a grim new chapter of modern history. For an intelligent opinion, they want all the news—from the battlefields on land, the submarine zones at sea, from the warring capitals, the neighboring neutrals and the sensitive commodity markets of the world.

This newspaper is fully prepared to bring its readers that complete story. It is prepared because it is a member of The Associated Press, the world-wide news gathering organization which today maintains the largest and most experienced news staff ever assembled in Europe. There are more than 2,500 alert correspondents on that staff—many times more than the number of men assigned to report the World War for AP a quarter of a century ago.

Several outstanding members of this large, carefully coordinated news gathering army are pictured above. They represent only a few of the 110 American-trained newspaper men located in key spots to cover the news as it occurs and to direct the work of the far flung auxiliary force of resident correspondents and accredited reporters. Many of the men have had previous experience with modern war, some dating back to World War days.

All these men have only one job—to report the facts accurately, promptly and fully for 1,400 member newspapers from Maine to Key West, from New York to San Francisco, and to report those facts without sensational embellishment or wartime hysteria. The minute-by-minute reports of these correspondents are flashed into this newspaper's office day and night and our own staff hurries the dispatches to waiting presses for regular or extra editions, depending on the gravity of the news.

You will find the complete STORY of The Great War at your fingertips in this newspaper every day.

Finland Cheered By Reports Russ May Be Lenient

Outside Pressure Said To Have Been Brought Against Soviets

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Helsinki, Oct 12 (AP)—Finland today welcomed reports of United States representations in her behalf in Moscow where a Finnish delegation gathered around the same Kremlin conference table at which Soviet Russia had obtained major concessions from three other Baltic states.

Officials maintained silence, but well-informed observers said these reports confirmed their belief that powerful outside forces were working to save Finland from demands such as those which reduced Estonia, Latvia, and Luthuania to the status of virtual Soviet protectorates.

(In Washington it was learned authoritatively that Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States ambassador to Moscow, conveyed to Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff the United States' "earnest hope" that Russia would refrain from extreme demands which would disturb peaceful Russian-Finnish relations.

(It was also reliably reported in Moscow that ministers there of Scandinavian countries followed Steinhardt in urging Soviet moderation in and proposals to the Finns.)

Finns Prepare To Fight

Finland, meanwhile, continued with headlong preparations to fight for her independencme in the event she felt forced to resist the Soviet demands, ond which Finns here thus far have not been enlightened.

Optimists found comfort in the fact that early reports were lacking on the opening of the Kremlin negotiations at which the Finnish delegation, headed by former Premier Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, conferred for an hour with Molotoff, Joseph Stalin and Vice Commissar Vladimir Potemkim.

These sources speculated that the Russian demands at least had not seemer so unreasonable to the Finnish envoy as to lack a basis for discussion.

On the other hand, those who watched long lines of women and children fleeing Helsinki to the safer einvirons of the countryside were less hopeful. Military activity on all sides also served as a brim reminder that the country might be in danger.

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko, scheduled to make a radio address to the United States early tomorrow morning, held up the final draft of his speech until the last moment in the hope that he could include some word of the Moscow developments.

No Demands Made

"I am convenced that Russian government does not want anything to happen any more than we do," he said in an interview.

"No demands have been put before us yet. We have been askd to exchange views and we have no reason to reject such a request. We would do the same for any other state."

The foreign minister, who has remained night and day at his office since Moscow's "invitation" to the parley created a serious situation, said that "of course" he had communicated with friendly nations. He held a long distance conversation yesterday with Washington, presumably with the Finnish minister.

The removal of some 120,000 residents from Helsinki, the statesman -newspaper publisher said, was a "precautionary measure."

"Modern neutrality is active neutrality," he added.

Field Marshal Gustav Mannerheim, aged leader of Finland's army of 300,000, issued a statement on the nation's defense forces, asserting:

"Even if we are citizens of a small country I think the world knows our attitude on the question regarding the country's freedom and defense.

"In recent years this attitude has brought about energetic work to strengthen our defense forces. Observers will find strength and steadfastness behind the calmness that is shown."

In Helsinki the hurry and bustle of those leaving the city was matched by the intense defense preparations.

Start Building Barracks

Barracks were going up in some sections of the city to house civil guards.

Many women refused to join the exodus, remaining to do what jobs they could in the common cause. Some were employed as hod carriers on the barracks buildings projects.

The sick and injured were being removed from some hospitals.

Women and young girls in the cotton uniform of the women's division of the civil guards appeared on the streets in ever growing numbers.

Fortifications on the Russian border, where Soviet troops have been reported massing, were strengthened. In the more thickly populated centers air raid precautions are well under way with some streets dotted with mounds of earth from freshly built dugouts.

New Board Home For Pennsylvania To Save Money

Structure Ready in April Will Stop Lot of Rentals

Harrisburg, Oct. 12 (AP)—The new million-dollar home of the State Liquor Control Board is rising rapidly a block from the capitol. Steel framework is disappearing swiftly behind the white and yellow of limestone and brick.

When finished next year it will bring, for the first time, the various units of the control board under one roof. The state has been paying heavy rentals for scattered office buildings since the board was created in 1934.

The board estimated it will save about $30,000 a year by having its own building.

Cautiously Planned

It was planned by cautious state officials, however, who took into consideration that some day there might not be a liquor control board. Consequently there are no special features which would make it impossible to use for any other state offices.

The structure will have six floors and a laboratory tower. All first-floor space will be devoted to hearing rooms and the public generally. Licensing and enforcing offices will be on the second and third floors; accounting, legal and similar departments on the third; staff offices, public relations, purchasing and perpetual inventory on the fourth; and the board members' offices on the fifth.

The building is expected to be ready for occupancy next April, the board said. Six hundred employes will work there.

James Not To Speak

The Republican campaign will have to get along in these last few weeks preceding the November 7 municipal elections without any oratorical help from Governor James.

The chief executive, always a fiery stump speaker, disclosed he does not intend to make a single speech in behalf of any candidate.

He left his reasons up to the imagination of capitol newspapermen.

James has concentrated recently on the executive end of his job as governor, and in addition has had plenty of personal affairs to handle. Not the least deterrent to any speech-making he might have had in mind for the campaign was the recent death of his only son and namesake.

Causes Speculation

A group of workmen replacing bulbs in the house of representatives chandeliers has started some speculation around the capitol. Getting ready for a possible special legislative session?

Wanted It, Anyway

Feeling, as he put it, "a little under the weather," Governor James lay on a leather couch in his office when the newsmen arrived for their periodical press conference recently. He stayed in that position while answering the barrage of questions, explaining:

"I always wanted an office with a couch in it."

P. S.—He hasn't used it since.

Squirrel Quite Costly For Parkersburg Man

Parkersburg, W. Va., Oct. 12 (AP)—A squirrel Paul Swearingen killed cost him a $100 fine and a jail sentence of 100 days.

Game Warden C. C. Carter said Sweaeringen killed the squirrel days before opening of the season October 16 with the intention of making a stew.

He was convicted and the sentence imposed.

"We wouldn't have been so severe with Swearingen if this had been his first offense," said Carter. "But we have had trouble with him before."

Three others arrested previously for killing game out of season drew $25 fines.

Approximately 3,000 cross ties are used for each mile of railroad track in the United States.

Flowers for the Living

ROSES . . . decorate the coiffure of this lovely model.

* * * * * *

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAIR ORNAMENTS from "way back when" are being revived. Ask grandma to let you go through her relics; you may dig up some grand tortoise treasures. Old-fashioned barrettes are just the thing to anchor hoisted curls and puffs, and they look well with dime-size hats stuck over the impertinent nose.

If you are the ethereal type of girl, you can wear a single rose in your hair, stuck over one ear or clamped down on the top of your thinking motor. Fresh flowers or fake ones—it doesn't matter which. Your florist will make you a rosette of lilies of the valley or other small blooms that stay fresh throughout the jolly evening party.

Clips of all kinds are still good style. They're useful, too, for keeping a wayward lock in place or anchoring an uppity wave line that thinks it wants down. The high hairdress calls for tuck combs. The brightly-colored ones, cherry or jade, are fetching. Tricky ornaments are made of feathers, others of shells. And, of course, there are all manner of expensive jeweled decorations with which to make your coiffure chic and gala.

Use discretion when making a choice; have to consider the frock. These cutie lalas for the topcrest are dressy in the extreme, and the over-dressed woman overshoots fashion's bull's-eye.

When wrinkles appear, it is because the underlying tissues and fibers have lost tone and relaxed, leaving the skin sizes too big, to fall into ripples and crinkles.

By using cold water freely, frictioning with an ice cube and applying astringents, this condition can be checked. A little more cream and butter in the diet will help, too. Long hours of refreshing sleep give the facial cells a chance to be restored.

Massage is of benefit, but it must not be heavy if the tissues have become depleted. A light tapping and hammering will stimulate the blood streams. Keep on with friction until the cream has almost disappeared. The human hide thrives on lubricating substances.

Nothing is quite so exciting as getting a brand new coiffure. Sets one on one's toes, puts ginger in the heels. As the hair dresser does the trimming, the shears sing a song of hope for beauty.

Though the high hairdo has caught a few devotees, the long bob still flourishes. The reason? It is soft and flattering, does not require as much attention as rolls and curls atop the brain roof. A good permanent, a finger wave every week or two, and all you need to do is to sweep through the silky strands with a comb, brush up the ends.

But there's a fly in the ointment. The long bob blankets the neck in hot weather, feels untidy and messy. And you have to be pretty careful that you tuck it all into your bathing cap.

reasons to believe that our State and County educational administration is far from being as democratic as we would hope it to be. We are all staunch devotees of the democratic principles on which our great nation was founded, and we believe in the promotion of these principles in our state and county governments. We of Mt. Savage share the belief of many more citizens throughout the county, that our boards of education should be elected by the people they serve, rather than be appointed.

Taxpayers Deserve Some Say

Does it not seem entirely reasonable that the taxpayers should have some voice as to who should be vested with the administration of our school system? And that the public should have some say as to who is to be vested with the authority of spending the massive sums of taxpayer's money that must be expended each year to meet our educational needs?

"We are proud of our schools (Mt. Savage school excluded), and suggest that all the citizens of our county take an active interest in our educational system which so vitally concerns each and every one of us."

Mt. Savage

school needs of Mt. Savage have long been known to our local Board of Education, it might be well to dwell briefly on Dr. Benjamin's scheduled topic, 'Who Runs the Schools?' as pertaining to our own situation.

"It is generally known that the head of the Department of Education is the State Board of Education, appointed by the Governor. This Board selects a State Superintendent of Schools and, through him and his assistants, has general control of the public school system of the State. The State Superintendent's approval is necessary in the appointment of the county superintendents, supervisors, and attendance officers by the County Boards of Education.

"Seemingly Deliberate Neglect"

"Educational matters affecting a county shall be under the control of a County Board of Education. The members of this board are appointed by the governor, subject to the approval of the State Superintendent. This set-up appears to be all right, but the taxpayers and citizens of Mt. Savage, because of seemingly deliberate neglect of their educational needs for the past number of years, are inclined to believe that they have been somewhat divorced from the foregoing state and county arrangement.

Flowers for the Living

ROSES . . . decorate the coiffure of this lovely model.

• • • • • •

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAIR ORNAMENTS from "way back when" are being revived. Ask grandma to let you go through her relics; you may dig up some grand tortoise treasures. Old-fashioned barrettes are just the thing to anchor hoisted curls and puffs, and they look well with dime-size hats stuck over the impertinent nose.

If you are the ethereal type of girl, you can wear a single rose in your hair, stuck over one ear or clamped down on the top of your thinking motor. Fresh flowers or fake ones—it doesn't matter which. Your florist will make you a rosette of lilies of the valley or other small blooms that stay fresh throughout the jolly evening party.

Clips of all kinds are still good style. They're useful, too, for keeping a wayward lock in place or anchoring an uppity wave line that thinks it wants down. The high hairdress calls for tuck combs. The brightly-colored ones, cherry or jade, are fetching. Tricky ornaments are made of feathers, others of shells. And, of course, there are all manner of expensive jeweled decorations with which to make your coiffure chic and gala.

Use discretion when making a choice; have to consider the frock. These cutie lalas for the topcrest are dressy in the extreme, and the over-dressed woman overshoots fashion's bull's-eye.

When wrinkles appear, it is because the underlying tissues and fibers have lost tone and relaxed, leaving the skin sizes too big, to fall into ripples and crinkles.

By using cold water freely, frictioning with an ice cube and applying astringents, this condition can be checked. A little more cream and butter in the diet will help, too. Long hours of refreshing sleep give the facial cells a chance to be restored.

Massage is of benefit, but it must not be heavy if the tissues have become depleted. A light tapping and hammering will stimulate the blood streams. Keep on with friction until the cream has almost disappeared. The human hide thrives on lubricating substances.

Nothing is quite so exciting as getting a brand new coiffure. Sets one on one's toes, puts ginger in the heels. As the hair dresser does the trimming, the shears sing a song of hope for beauty.

Though the high hairdo has caught a few devotees, the long bob still flourishes. The reason? It is soft and flattering, does not require as much attention as rolls and curls atop the brain roof. A good permanent, a finger wave every week or two, and all you need to do is to sweep through the silky strands with a comb, brush up the ends.

But there's a fly in the ointment. The long bob blankets the neck in hot weather, feels untidy and messy. And you have to be pretty careful that you tuck it all into your bathing cap.

reasons to believe that our State and County educational administration is far from being as democratic as we would hope it to be. We are all staunch devotees of the democratic principles on which our great nation was founded, and we believe in the promotion of these principles in our state and county governments. We of Mt. Savage share the belief of many more citizens throughout the county, that our boards of education should be elected by the people they serve, rather than be appointed.

Taxpayers Deserve Some Say

Does it not seem entirely reasonable that the taxpayers should have some voice as to who should be vested with the administration of our school system? And that the public should have some say as to who is to be vested with the authority of spending the massive sums of taxpayer's money that must be expended each year to meet our educational needs?

"We are proud of our schools (Mt. Savage school excluded), and suggest that all the citizens of our county take an active interest in our educational system which so vitally concerns each and every one of us."

Slow Down at Sundown, Police Urge As W. Va. Moves To Cut Traffic Toll

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 12—Faced with a mounting toll of pedestrian deaths after dark, department of public safety officials today urged state automobile and truck drivers to "slow down after sundown" and asked persons who walk the highways to wear clothing which is visible at greater distances and carry lights to distinguish themselves.

Reporting that ecords for the first nine months of this year show a tendency on the part of both drivers and pedestrians to become careless after sundown, state police revealed that thirty-nine out of eighty-seven pedestrian accidents on country highways occurred between the hours of 7 p. m. to 1 a. m. Eighteen out of thirty-one pedestrian accidents in cities and towns also took place during the same period.

This is in line with national statistics which show that three-fourths of pedestrian fatalities occur during one-third of the day when visibility for both drivers and those who might walk to their deaths is at its lowest point.

Inspect Lights

As a part of road inspections which are now being conducted by all companies of state troopers lights are being carefully examined. In Charleston Supt. C. C. Tallman of the department of public safety added that "special attention will be paid to night driving in an effort to cut down fatalities."

Most pedestrians who do not drive, findings of the department's accident prevention bureau revealed, fail to realize how difficult it is for approaching drivers to see them during dusk and at night. The headlights of a car seem bright to a pedestrian while far away. As the car draws nearer the lights become so bright at a distance of nearly 300 feet there is often light enough to read a newspaper.

Tests have proved, however, that a pedestrian wearing dark clothing cannot be seen by a driver within ninety-five to 195 feet. With West Virginia highways famous for their curves it is possible that a car rounding a curve may not spot a pedestrian in dark clothes in an even shorter distance.

White Helps Visibility

Yet it is pertinent that a pedestrian wearing a white handkerchief has become visible anywhere from 164 to 291 feet, while those with clothing covering a large white area can be spotted anywhere from 206 to 377 feet.

With fall and winter months reducing the hours of daylight even more, troopers assert that night driving is largely responsible for the annual seasonal increase in fatalities in West Virginia. This is bearing out again this year when state road deaths jumped from eighteen in July to thirty-two in August and up to thirty-nine in September, the two highest months of 1939. With the number continuing to climb during October, all hopes of finishing this year with 300 or less highway fatalities is lost unless a check is effected immediately.

Eary results of the road inspections bring out the fact that many cars show headlight deficiencies. Few headlights, even on new cars it was reported, can drop fifty percent in efficiency in a few months. Drivers are being instructed to keep their headlight lenses cleaned, reflectors polished, bulbs replaced when needed and headlight beams properly directed.

The latest to die was 16-year-old Lucille White of Bartley, valedictorian last year of the junior high school class.

Five other students and Hubert L. Belcher, 39, the driver, were killed or fatally injured yesterday when a broken axle sent the bus rolling over a 75-foot cliff at the edge of War.

In addition to the six gravely injured, there were 63 others hurt.

The white girl suffered a ruptured spleen.

Hospital officials said the condition of Pauline Jessie, 15, became critical overnight, but that her condition late today was somewhat improved.

Still on the "critical" list were James White, 16, of Omar; Jessie Mullens, 15, of Raysal; Charles Flannagan, 18, of Bartley; Virginia Logan, 16, of English; Claude Ryan, 16, of Bartley.

Parents, meanwhile, arranged for theb urial of the dead.

Funeral services will be held for the Beavers girl and the Woody and Earle boys, and on Saturday for Belcher.

Slow Down at Sundown, Police Urge As W. Va. Moves To Cut Traffic Toll

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 12—Faced with a mounting toll of pedestrian deaths after dark, department of public safety officials today urged state automobile and truck drivers to "slow down after sundown" and asked persons who walk the highways to wear clothing which is visible at greater distances and carry lights to distinguish themselves.

Reporting that ecords for the first nine months of this year show a tendency on the part of both drivers and pedestrians to become careless after sundown, state police revealed that thirty-nine out of eighty-seven pedestrian accidents on country highways occurred between the hours of 7 p. m. to 1 a. m. Eighteen out of thirty-one pedestrian accidents in cities and towns also took place during the same period.

This is in line with national statistics which show that three-fourths of pedestrian fatalities occur during one-third of the day when visibility for both drivers and those who might walk to their deaths is at its lowest point.

Inspect Lights

As a part of road inspections which are now being conducted by all companies of state troopers lights are being carefully examined. In Charleston Supt. C. C. Tallman of the department of public safety added that "special attention will be paid to night driving in an effort to cut down fatalities."

Most pedestrians who do not drive, findings of the department's accident prevention bureau revealed, fail to realize how difficult it is for approaching drivers to see them during dusk and at night. The headlights of a car seem bright to a pedestrian while far away. As the car draws nearer the lights become so bright at a distance of nearly 300 feet there is often light enough to read a newspaper.

Tests have proved, however, that a pedestrian wearing dark clothing cannot be seen by a driver within ninety-five to 195 feet. With West Virginia highways famous for their curves it is possible that a car rounding a curve may not spot a pedestrian in dark clothes in an even shorter distance.

White Helps Visibility

Yet it is pertinent that a pedestrian wearing a white handkerchief has become visible anywhere from 164 to 291 feet, while those with clothing covering a large white area can be spotted anywhere from 206 to 377 feet.

With fall and winter months reducing the hours of daylight even more, troopers assert that night driving is largely responsible for the annual seasonal increase in fatalities in West Virginia. This is bearing out again this year when state road deaths jumped from eighteen in July to thirty-two in August and up to thirty-nine in September, the two highest months of 1939. With the number continuing to climb during October, all hopes of finishing this year with 300 or less highway fatalities is lost unless a check is effected immediately.

Eary results of the road inspections bring out the fact that many cars show headlight deficiencies. Few headlights, even on new cars it was reported, can drop fifty percent in efficiency in a few months. Drivers are being instructed to keep their headlight lenses cleaned, reflectors polished, bulbs replaced when needed and headlight beams properly directed.

School Bus Crash Toll Mounts to 7; 6 on 'Danger' List

Girl, 16, Is Latest To Die after Bus Wrecks near War, W. Va.

Welch, W. Va., Oct. 12 (AP) — A seventh victim was added today to the list of those fatally hurt in the wreck of a school bus at War, and six high school students still were listed as "in danger."

The latest to die was 16-year-old Lucille White of Bartley, valedictorian last year of the junior high school class.

Five other students and Hubert L. Belcher, 39, the driver, were killed or fatally injured yesterday when a broken axle sent the bus rolling over a 75-foot cliff at the edge of War.

In addition to the six gravely injured, there were 63 others hurt.

Others in the list of dead:
Charles Colvard, 16, of Raysal.
Maxine Beavers, 18, of Bartley.
Lucille Mullens, 17, of Raysal.
Ernest Norman Woody, 17, of Bartley.
Ralph Earls, 17, of Bartley.

The white girl suffered a ruptured spleen.

Hospital officials said the condition of Pauline Jessie, 15, became critical overnight, but that her condition late today was somewhat improved.

Still on the "critical" list were James White, 16, of Omar; Jessie Mullens, 15, of Raysal; Charles Flannagan, 18, of Bartley; Virginia Logan, 16, of English; Claude Ryan, 16, of Bartley.

Parents, meanwhile, arranged for theb urial of the dead.

Funeral services will be held for the Beavers girl and the Woody and Earle boys, and on Saturday for Belcher.

State Superintendent of Schools W. W. Trent expressed his "profoundest sympathy" today at Charleston to the parents and friends of children killed and injured and pledged every effort to give children future protection "even better than they have been protected in the past.

"This accident is now being investigated that the cause may be known," Trent added, "that every assistance to the injured may be given and that future accidents may be prevented."

James Roosevelt Demotes Himself

Washington, Oct. 12 (AP)—At his own request, James Roosevelt has been demoted from lieutenant colonel to captain in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Officials said today the president's eldest son decided voluntarily that the rank he had held as a White House aide was "too high for my age and experience."

His resignation as lieutenant colonel and simultaneous application for another commission two notches lower were accepted before he left the capital yesterday to return to his job as a motion picture executive.

Some routine forms as to physical condition remain to be filled out before the new commission is formally issued.

Not yet 32, Roosevelt is young even for a captain. He was only 28 when made a lieutenant colonel to serve as aide to his father at the 1936 Buenos Aires peace conference. The rank was useful then in matters of diplomatic precedence, officials suggested.

There was some criticism at the time because he was given such a high rank. Replying in a formal statement, Secretary Swanson said that Roosevelt "fulfilled all the professional and physical requirements for a commission."

Boy Leaving School Bus Hit by Truck

Second Youth Struck by Car Of Minister

Struck by a bakery truck as he alighted from a school bus in Franklin yesterday afternoon, a 6-year-old boy was reported in a serious condition last night at Reeves clinic in Westernport.

Robert Wilt suffered a concussion of the brain, a fractured left hip, possible internal injuries and multiple scalp lacerations when he was knocked down by a truck said to have been driven by James McDonald Jr., of near Barton, on the Georges Creek boulevard.

Details of the accident, which occurred about 4:45 p. m., were not available last night, as State police were still investigating. No charges had been placed against McDonald, so far as could be learned.

It was reported that the child ran in front of the McDonald car after getting off the bus.

Boy Being Chased Hit by Auto

A ten-year-old boy was injured late yesterday afternoon on the Ellerslie road when he was struck by a car while being chased by several other youths.

The lad, Stanley E. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Miller, of Ellerslie, sustained a deep laceration on his right fereleg when he was struck by the machine driven by the Rev. George W. Sprinkle, pastor of the Evangelical church at Ellerslie.

The accident occurred about 5:20 o'clock as Dr. Sprinkle was returning home from Indiana, Pa., where he had been visiting relatives. He was about to turn off the highway into a side road when the boy darted in front of his car, he said.

Witnesses sai dth Miller boy was being pursued by several other youths, who were throwing stones at him prior to the accident. Miller was looking over his shoulder and didn't see the car approach, it was said.

Dr. Sprinkle brought the boy to Allegany hospital, where twelve sutures were used to close the wound in his leg. He was released after being treated.

State Trooper B. C. Mason investigated. No charges were placed against the clergyman.

Officials Spared Writer's Cramp

Sign Savage Bonds With Aid of Science

Simeon W. Green and R. Mason Hill signed their names 1,080 times in Baltimore yesterday but strangely enough, they didn't have writer's cramp last night.

That's because science came to their aid, and they had to actually push the pen around only fifty-four times.

Mr. Green, president of the board of county commissioners, and Mr. Hill, clerk to the board, had to sign each of the 1,000 thousand-dollar Savage River Dam bonds, as well as each of the eighty thousand-dollar road bonds, before the banking house of Alexander Brown and Sons would turn over $1,080,000.

They used a multiple check-writer, and one push of the pen wrote their signatures twenty times.

The board officials were accompanied to Baltimore by County Treasurer Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer, to whom the law provides the funds must be given.

The million-dollar check will be turned over to the Upper Potomac River Commission for use in buying equipment, etc. for the Savage River Dam, on which work got underway this week.

The $80,000 will be used to keep county WPA projects going.

What's In a Name! Plenty Says GOP

The name of the Republican party is not to be bandied, about, not if the members of the Sixth District Republican Club have anything to do with it.

Meeting last night in Knights of Malta hall, the club passed a resolution asking the Republican State Central Committee for Allegany county to take steps to have the Republican Club on Baltimore street change its name—to anything but Republican.

George Henderson, State Central Committee chairman, spoke on his trip to Europe.

War's Anxiety Strikes Home

Relatives Silent In Battered Warsaw

George Conlon today has something on his mind other than the latest piece of sculpture he is completing in Paris for the Red Cross, it was revealed yesterday by his brother, Cumberland's Tom Conlon.

George Conlon, a former Allegany county coal miner who has become one of this country's leading ex-soldier sculptors, married a Polish girl whose uncle was a one-time bishop of Warsaw.

Mrs. Conlon's mother lives in Warsaw, or at least she did until the mechsnized German army struck several weeks ago.

Since that time the Conlons haven't heard a word from her. Consequently, both are very worried and are hopeful that each day will bring them good news from the shell-torn city.

The Cumberland branch of the Conlon family have extended their sympathy to the Paris Conlons and have told them not to worry too much, that everything will probably turn out all right.

Republican Clubs Beat One Jinx

The newly-organized Republican club of Election Districts 18, 19 and 27, may pay a little more attention to superstition after this

The officers ignored the Friday the thirteenth jinx and called a meeting for 8 o'clock tonight at Red Mens hall in Midland.

But County Treasurer Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer will be unable to speak, as was scheduled. Official business called him out of town, the club learned yesterday.

It may not be such a jinx at that, though, officers said last night, announcing that County Commissioner James C. Holmes, of Lonaconing, has volunteered to pinch-hit for "Buck."

But the Republicans are praying that nothing will happen to force Commissioner Jimmy to cancel his address. They hope, too, that there will be more than thirteen at the meeting.

Three New Cases On Criminal Docket

Three new cases were placed on the criminal docket yesterday as Circuit court attaches prepared for arraignment of prisoners tomorrow.

Bringing to thirty-five the total docketed to date, new cases are: Marshall Tippen, two charges of forgery; Sylvester C. Dreyer, wife-beating; and Everett L. Miller, violation of the workmen's compensation law.

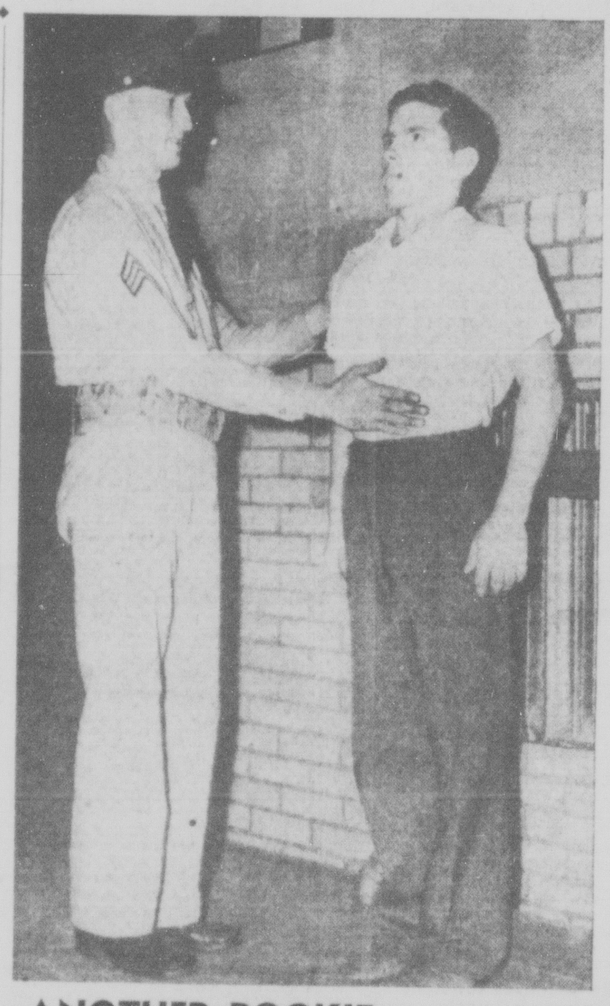

Careless Driving Charged

Earl O. Fryer, of Ridgeley, was arrested yesterday morning in downtown Cumberland by Officer Robert V. Chisholm for careless driving. Fryer was released under $10 bond for a hearing this morning in Police court.

Strange Chess Set Here Recalls Horrors of Last World War

Mayor Harry Irvine yesterday untied a brown chamois bag on his deck and spilled out the strangest assortment of chess men anybody ever saw.

And as City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett and the mayor examined first one pawn and then another they couldn't help reflecting what a story each of those pieces could relate if only they could speak.

For the various pawns and bishops were made out of rifle and machine gun shells. And the bases for the various pieces were buttons torn from the underwear of dead soldiers.

Made In France

But to tell the story adequately it is necessary to go back a long way, twenty-one years to be exact, when the American Expeditionary force to France was engaged in mopping up in the Argonne.

One of the thousands engaged in the offensive was a Dr. Julian Sibley, Mayor Irvine's brother-in-law and a one-time machinist, who had graduated into dentistry. His job was as important as that of the doughboys with the flashing bayonets. For no soldier can fight very well if he has a splitting toothache.

Keps Dentist Tools Busy

Like the present war, there were dull days as well as active days back in 1918. And the dull periods were actually harder on energetic American soldiers than when they were on the go.

Huddled in trenches and rude dugouts, a soldier became restless unless he could find something to occupy his mind.

And Dr. Sibley, the former machinist, attacked the problem in a characteristic ingenious manner. Always a lover of chess and checkers, he decided to make use of his dentist's tools and what material he had at hand.

Using long army-rifle shells and the shorter, more pointed machine-gun shells, he hammered out kings and pawns, adorning each with individualistic shapes. Eventually, he had made an entire set.

Buttons from the Dead

However, the problem of making them stand up remained. Buttons were then cut from the underwear of dead soldiers. The buttons were wired to the various chess pieces. And the set was complete.

The fuselage of a shot - down enemy plane provided the board. Luckily enough, the plane had been decorated with a checked-off space much like a chess board. It was readily made over.

Then, with the bombs screaming over the lines, Dr. Sibley and other chess-minded soldiers, blotted out the bombs and gunfire by sheer concentration.

A Story Never To Be Told

Nobody knows just who the buttons originally belonged to, but it is interesting to speculate. A pawn Mayor Irvine held in his hand was possibly once the property of a young German shot down before he reached voting age, not that having reached voting age would have ever

Guard Rookies Learn There's More To Soldiering than Shooting Guns

Most rookies in the army discover that it takes a much longer time to become a general than they thought.

But despite minor disillusions that temporarily dismay the potential generals, the average Allegany county rookie who joins up with a national guard unit proves himself an apt pupil.

As one veteran army man said yesterday, "the old 'squads right, squads left' used to play hell with rookies, but they take to shootin' and combat tactics, like ducks to water."

Off They Go

Now the officers just bark "right face, forward, march," and off they go straight ahead.

And going straight ahead is one of the things rookies like to do best, according to officers in Company G, Cumberland's unit of the National Guard. There's something about going ahead that just seems practical to an average Maryland rookie.

But there's a lot to it. It requires a heap of learnin' despite the natural aptitude of the average rookie to shoot a gun and hit what he's aiming at.

Strangely enough, when a healthy young Cumberland lad joins the guard they don't give him a gun the first day and say "Go to it son, mow down the enemy."

It Was Different in '76

Joining th army today is a far cry from the days of 1776 when the Redcoats started coming up the road. At that time farmers unhitched their horses from their plows, tookk the flintlock and powder horn down from the mantle, and sashayed forth for the nearest rail fence. Just like that and they were in the army.

Today your Cumberland rookie marches forth minus gun to learn how to stand up straight. He is first taught the position of attention with his heels together and toes out, arms at side, chest lifted and stomach in.

Army Etiquette

Having mastered this ramrod pose he is taught marchings and facings such as right face, left face, forward march, and halt.

Then he is taught the courtesies and customs of the army, which include being polite to his top sergeant and saluting the proper people at the proper places instead of saying "Hi Flintface."

Having learned courtesy, the embryo soldier is then given a gun which he is taught how to hold. To his regret, the rookie discovers that it will be quite some spell before he fires a few shots at something.

Learns Squad Maneuvers

Having learned to hold his gun, the rookie then is placed in a squad. A squad used to comprise seven other rookies. Now it can be any number of rookies up to twelve. The rookie then learns how to fall in, stand at arms length from the nearest man, and general movements.

And still he has fired nary a shot. And by this time his feet hurt.

Having mastered the movements of the squad, the rookie's squad next joins a platoon which consists of three squads. Then he learns the movements of the platoon.

It goes on up from there until they finally get an army.

Silent Rifle Practice

Then, at long last, the rookie is told that he will soon fire off his gun. But first he must learn to take his position, adjust things in

Mt. Savage Asks More Democracy In School System

Citizens Committee Wants Board Elected Instead of Appointed

The Mt. Savage Citizens Committee yesterday issued another statement calling for more democracy in the administration of the county school system and urging election of county boards of education rather than their appointment.

The statement follows:

"Mt. Savage residents are much interested in an article that appeared in the Baltimore Sun for Sunday, Oct. 8, namely, 'State P-TA Congress Meets in November'. With the tense situation prevailing in regard to the protested neglect of our local educational needs, it is interesting to learn that the administration of school affairs in counties other than Allegany will be dwelt upon at the State P-TA Congress Meeting in November.

"The Sun article stated in part: 'Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of education at the University of Maryland, will discuss 'What Democracy' at Wednesday morning's session, and the symposium that evening will be 'Who Runs the Schools?' and 'Adjustment of School and Community Needs.'

Striking Resemblance

"While the light in which these topics will be discussed at this state meeting in November may be different from that of our local controversy, the scheduled topics of discussion bear a striking resemblance to those relating to our own county. While the most urgent

Road Blasters 'Wrecked Home'

Like Earthquake, Says Woman's Suit

Damages of $10,000 are asked of the Cumberland Contracting Company by a Westernport woman who claims blasting by the company had the "effect of an earthquake" on her home.

The suit of Belle Marie Tonry, docketed in Circuit court yesterday by Attorney Charles G. Watson, says that the damage was done when the company blasted near her home in January while building a new highway.

It charges that the company "carelessly, negligently, and wantonly set off a series of blasts or explosions of unnecessary and destructive violence which set up such a violent vibration . . . as to have the effect of an earthquake and caused the home to shake and vibrate with destructive consequences.

House Shook Violently

The blasts were repeated "a number of times shortly thereafter, and each time the house was violently shaken," according to the bill of complaint, which lists the results as follows:

The foundation walls were cracked; the plaster was cracked and broken; the house frame was twisted and the joints strained and weakened; the flues were broken and ruined; the gas and water plumbing was broken and ruined; door and window jams were twisted out of shape and made unworkable; and the "cold air now comes in around windows, doors, baseboards, wall angles, and numerous other cracks and crevices."

Concrete Walks Broken

Concrete walks in the yard have also been cracked and broken, the suit says.

It adds: "The destruction wrought by the explosions and blasts appears to be increasing as time goes by," and the house is "unfit and unsafe to live in."

The bill of complaint explains that the new road passes within seventy-five yards of the plaintiff's house and is graded down to some thirty feet or more below the surface of her land.

It is this support which the suit claims the "earthquake" rocked on January 19.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

You may or may not be interested in the fact that an impending maternity case in the state of Maryland has slightly better than one chance in 100 of being twins. The chances of triplets are about fourteen in 10,000, if we figured it out correctly.

Anyway, the census bureau reports there were 29,013 births in Maryland last year, including four sets of triplets and 308 sets of twins.

One set of triplets was all boys, one all girls, and two consisted of two boys and a sister.

Of the 308 sets of twins, 109 sets were 100 per cent male, 108 sets were all girls, and ninety-one sets were brother and sister.

Mothers between the ages of twenty and twenty-four gave birth to approximately one third of the babies born in the state, leading all other age groups in this respect.

So much for vital statistics. And now for a little story to illustrate the text that you never can tell what sort of tragic or romantic story may be living in the mind of the most ordinary, humdrum sort of person.

We picked up a hitch-hiker, a chunky, ruddy-faced fellow in faded blue overalls with all his spare belongings done up in a bulky, wrapping-paper bundle.

He was on his way from the Valley of Virginia to the steel mills of Pittsburgh.

"Used to work for Carnegie Steel," he said. "I saw a little piece in the paper about the mills picking up. I think I can get a job up there again.

"I was picking apples, but counting the time you lose on rainy days and the board and room you have to pay, you don't make much. And a fellow has to be looking ahead toward the winter. He's got to get a little stake together.

"If I can't get in the mills, I think I'll join the army. I'm a little old for that, but I'll tell 'em I'm 35 and they don't ask many questions when they need men bad.

"I read another little piece in the paper about this war, and I reckon maybe it's going to last a long time."

We were passing through Fort Ashby then. The hitch-hiker looked around over the sunlit fields and the dying gardens and the women folk resting on the porches.

"Wish I had a little house in a place like this," he said, "where a fellow could do odd jobs around."

We asked rather bluntly why he wasn't married.

He didn't answer right away, just sort of looked out at the bright colors of the falling leaves.

"Sometimes I think it would have been better if I had got married when I was younger," he said finally. "A long time ago I went with a girl for three years, while I was working hard to get some money together and she was sewing things and saving.

"But she had scarlet fever and died, and after that. . .

He was far away for a moment, then remarked crisply, "Getting colder, isn't it? Reckon I'll go right on to Bedford. You get a straight shoot in to Pittsburgh then."

Such Popularity Must Be Deserved

Hubert G. Baumhoff is a popular man—with police authorities.

Another evidence of this popularity was a message received yesterday by Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe from Peoria, Ill., announcing that they wanted him to return.

But, the telegram added, all was not forgiven. Sheriff August E. Stonebock, of Peoria county, wanted Baumhoff on a confidence game charge.

The dapper, 45-year-old Johnstown, Pa., man was picked up by city police earlier this week for Washington authorities. Investigation revealed that the authorities here had a charge of false pretense against him, too—for passing bad checks on George Eyerman, son of Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman.

He was ordered held for the grand jury, but it was indicated that he might be turned over to federal authorities, who seek him on an embezzlement count in a midwestern state.

Sheriff Radcliffe advised Sheriff Stonebock to forward a detainer against Baumhoff

'Nick' House, Yardmaster, Dies at 44

Was Well Known Along B&O After 28 Years

The word was being passed along the line today that husky Nick House, veteran wardmaster of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, had died yesterday in Allegany Hospital.

Charles E. "Nick" House had been a fixture in the B.&O. scheme of things in South Cumberland for more than twenty-five years. He was probably one of the best known men on the railroad.

Mr. House was born in Brunswick forty-four years ago. His family brought him to Cumberland at the age of one. When sixteen, he went to work for the B&O as a chalker, a man who marks cars.

After that he graduated from one job to another, including clerking, until he became yardmaster of Yard E in South Cumberland, where he had charge of breaking up arriving trains and making up new trains to leave the yards.

"Nick" House was a large, husky man weighing some 225 pounds. He was an ardent baseball fan, and sick as he was during the recent World Series he listened to every game with keen interest.

For nearly thirty years his life was the railroad, and he had few outside interests other than his home and baseball. He was a member of St. Mary's Church and two railroad organiaztions, the Railroad Clerks and the yardmaster's organiaztion.

He joined the United States Army during the World War but did not reach France.

After the war he promptly resumed his job with the B&O. The railroad was his only employer during his lifetime.

Surviving him is his widow, Mrs. Rose R. House; his father, Charles W. House; and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Umstot, all of Cumberland.

An illness which he was unable to throw off was responsible for his giving up his work just at a time when a business upsweep has caused a great increase of activity in the yard he used to boss.

His home was at 412 South street.

President Roosevelt today had decided it was high time the streets and alleys of Ridgeley be improved. He approved a $47,689 WPA project to achieve that end.

The project is being returned to the state WPA office for action. The improvement program is expected to start soon.

Boy Leaving School Bus Hit by Truck

Second Youth Struck by Car Of Minister

Struck by a bakery truck as he alighted from a school bus in Franklin yesterday afternoon, a 6-year-old boy was reported in a serious condition last night at Reeves clinic in Westernport.

Robert Wilt suffered a concussion of the brain, a fractured left hip, possible internal injuries and multiple scalp lacerations when he was knocked down by a truck said to have been driven by James McDonald Jr., of near Barton, on the Georges Creek boulevard.

Details of the accident, which occurred about 4:45 p. m., were not available last night, as State police were still investigating. No charges had been placed against McDonald, so far as could be learned.

It was reported that the child ran in front of the McDonald car after getting off the bus.

Boy Being Chased Hit by Auto

A ten-year-old boy was injured late yesterday afternoon on the Ellerslie road when he was struck by a car while being chased by several other youths.

The lad, Stanley E. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Miller, of Ellerslie, sustained a deep laceration on his right fereleg when he was struck by the machine driven by the Rev. George W. Sprinkle, pastor of the Evangelical church at Ellerslie.

The accident occurred about 5:20 o'clock as Dr. Sprinkle was returning home from Indiana, Pa., where he had been visiting relatives. He was about to turn off the highway into a side road when the boy darted in front of his car, he said.

Witnesses sai dth Miller boy was being pursued by several other youths, who were throwing stones at him prior to the accident. Miller was looking over his shoulder and didn't see the car approach, it was said.

Dr. Sprinkle brought the boy to Allegany hospital, where twelve sutures were used to close the wound in his leg. He was released after being treated.

State Trooper B. C. Mason investigated. No charges were placed against the clergyman.

Officials Spared Writer's Cramp

Sign Savage Bonds With Aid of Science

Simeon W. Green and R. Mason Hill signed their names 1,080 times in Baltimore yesterday but strangely enough, they didn't have writer's cramp last night.

That's because science came to their aid, and they had to actually push the pen around only fifty-four times.

Mr. Green, president of the board of county commissioners, and Mr. Hill, clerk to the board, had to sign each of the 1,000 thousand-dollar Savage River Dam bonds, as well as each of the eighty thousand-dollar road bonds, before the banking house of Alexander Brown and Sons would turn over $1,080,000.

They used a multiple check-writer, and one push of the pen wrote their signatures twenty times.

The board officials were accompanied to Baltimore by County Treasurer Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer, to whom the law provides the funds must be given.

The million-dollar check will be turned over to the Upper Potomac River Commission for use in buying equipment, etc. for the Savage River Dam, on which work got underway this week.

The $80,000 will be used to keep county WPA projects going.

War's Anxiety Strikes Home

Relatives Silent In Battered Warsaw

George Conlon today has something on his mind other than the latest piece of sculpture he is completing in Paris for the Red Cross, it was revealed yesterday by his brother, Cumberland's Tom Conlon.

George Conlon, a former Allegany county coal miner who has become one of this country's leading ex-soldier sculptors, married a Polish girl whose uncle was a one-time bishop of Warsaw.

Mrs. Conlon's mother lives in Warsaw, or at least she did until the mechanized German army struck several weeks ago.

Having learned to hold his gun, the rookie then is placed in a squad. A squad used to comprise seven other rookies. Now it can be any number of rookies up to twelve. The rookie then learns how to fall in, stand at arms length from the nearest man, and general movements.

And still he has fired nary a shot. And by this time his feet hurt.

Having mastered the movements of the squad, the rookie's squad next joins a platoon which consists of three squads. Then he learns the movements of the platoon.

It goes on up from there until they finally get an army.

Silent Rifle Practice

Then, at long last, the rookie is told that he will soon fire off his gun. But first he must learn to take his position, adjust things in

Mt. Savage Asks More Democracy In School System

Citizens Committee Wants Board Elected Instead of Appointed

The Mt. Savage Citizens Committee yesterday issued another statement calling for more democracy in the administration of the county school system and urging election of county boards of education rather than their appointment.

The statement follows:

"Mt. Savage residents are much interested in an article that appeared in the Baltimore Sun for Sunday, Oct. 8, namely, 'State P-TA Congress Meets in November'. With the tense situation prevailing in regard to the protested neglect of our local educational needs, it is interesting to learn that the administration of school affairs in counties other than Allegany will be dwelt upon at the State P-TA Congress Meeting in November.

"The Sun article stated in part: 'Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of education at the University of Maryland, will discuss 'What Democracy' at Wednesday morning's session, and the symposium that evening will be 'Who Runs the Schools?' and 'Adjustment of School and Community Needs.'

Striking Resemblance

"While the light in which these topics will be discussed at this state meeting in November may be different from that of our local controversy, the scheduled topics of discussion bear a striking resemblance to those relating to our own county. While the most urgent

Road Blasters 'Wrecked Home'

Like Earthquake, Says Woman's Suit

Damages of $10,000 are asked of the Cumberland Contracting Company by a Westernport woman who claims blasting by the company had the "effect of an earthquake" on her home.

The suit of Belle Marie Tonry, docketed in Circuit court yesterday by Attorney Charles G. Watson, says that the damage was done when the company blasted near her home in January while building a new highway.

It charges that the company "carelessly, negligently, and wantonly set off a series of blasts or explosions of unnecessary and destructive violence which set up such a violent vibration . . . as to have the effect of an earthquake and caused the home to shake and vibrate with destructive consequences.

House Shook Violently

The blasts were repeated "a number of times shortly thereafter, and each time the house was violently shaken," according to the bill of complaint, which lists the results as follows:

The foundation walls were cracked; the plaster was cracked and broken; the house frame was twisted and the joints strained and weakened; the flues were broken and ruined; the gas and water plumbing was broken and ruined; door and window jams were twisted out of shape and made unworkable; and the "cold air now comes in around windows, doors, baseboards, wall angles, and numerous other cracks and crevices."

Concrete Walks Broken

Concrete walks in the yard have also been cracked and broken, the suit says.

It adds: "The destruction wrought by the explosions and blasts appears to be increasing as time goes by," and the house is "unfit and unsafe to live in."

The bill of complaint explains that the new road passes within seventy-five yards of the plaintiff's house and is graded down to some thirty feet or more below the surface of her land.

Her land, it goes on, is supported by a ledge of rocks composed of a number of layers of rocks with mud seams in between.

It is this support which the suit claims the "earthquake" rocked on January 19.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

You may or may not be interested in the fact that an impending maternity case in the state of Maryland has slightly better than one chance in 100 of being twins. The chances of triplets are about fourteen in 10,000, if we figured it out correctly.

Anyway, the census bureau reports there were 29,013 births in Maryland last year, including four sets of triplets and 308 sets of twins.

One set of triplets was all boys, one all girls, and two consisted of two boys and a sister.

Of the 308 sets of twins, 109 sets were 100 per cent male, 108 sets were all girls, and ninety-one sets were brother and sister.

Mothers between the ages of twenty and twenty-four gave birth to approximately one third of the babies born in the state, leading all other age groups in this respect.

So much for vital statistics. And now for a little story to illustrate the text that you never can tell what sort of tragic or romantic story may be living in the mind of the most ordinary, humdrum sort of person.

We picked up a hitch-hiker, a chunky, ruddy-faced fellow in faded blue overalls with all his spare belongings done up in a bulky, wrapping-paper bundle.

He was on his way from the Valley of Virginia to the steel mills of Pittsburgh.

"Used to work for Carnegie Steel," he said. "I saw a little piece in the paper about the mills picking up. I think I can get a job up there again.

"I was picking apples, but counting the time you lose on rainy days and the board and room you have to pay, you don't make much. And a fellow has to be looking ahead toward the winter. He's got to get a little stake together.

"If I can't get in the mills, I think I'll join the army. I'm a little old for that, but I'll tell 'em I'm 35 and they don't ask many questions when they need men bad.

"I read another little piece in the paper about this war, and I reckon maybe it's going to last a long time."

We were passing through Fort Ashby then. The hitch-hiker looked around over the sunlit fields and the dying gardens and the women folk resting on the porches.

"Wish I had a little house in a place like this," he said, "where a fellow could do odd jobs around."

We asked rather bluntly why he wasn't married.

He didn't answer right away, just sort of looked out at the bright colors of the falling leaves.

"Sometimes I think it would have been better if I had got married when I was younger," he said finally. "A long time ago I went with a girl for three years, while I was working hard to get some money together and she was sewing things and saving.

"But she had scarlet fever and died, and after that. . .

He was far away for a moment, then remarked crisply, "Getting colder, isn't it? Reckon I'll go right on to Bedford. You get a straight shoot in to Pittsburgh then."

Court Clerk Robert Jackson says it may have happened here, and then again it may have happened somewhere else, but an old negro who was brought before the judge announced his name was Joshua.

"Ah, the man who made the sun stand still?" quipped the judge.

"No suh, I'se the Joshua who made the moonshine, judge."

Such Popularity Must Be Deserved

Hubert G. Baumhoff is a popular man—with police authorities.

Another evidence of this popularity was a message received yesterday by Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe from Peoria, Ill., announcing that they wanted him to return.

But, the telegram added, all was not forgiven. Sheriff August E. Stonebock, of Peoria county, wanted Baumhoff on a confidence game charge.

The dapper, 45-year-old Johnstown, Pa., man was picked up by city police earlier this week for Washington authorities. Investigation revealed that the authorities here had a charge of false pretense against him, too—for passing bad checks on George Eyerman, son of Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman.

He was ordered held for the grand jury, but it was indicated that he might be turned over to federal authorities, who seek him on an embezzlement count in a midwestern state.

Sheriff Radcliffe advised Sheriff Stonebock to forward a detainer against Baumhoff.

'Nick' House, Yardmaster, Dies at 44

Was Well Known Along B&O After 28 Years

The word was being passed along the line today that husky Nick House, veteran wardmaster of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, had died yesterday in Allegany Hospital.

Charles E. "Nick" House had been a fixture in the B.&O. scheme of things in South Cumberland for more than twenty-five years. He was probably one of the best known men on the railroad.

Mr. House was born in Brunswick forty-four years ago. His family brought him to Cumberland at the age of one. When sixteen, he went to work for the B&O as a chalker, a man who marks cars.

After that he graduated from one job to another, including clerking, until he became yardmaster of Yard E in South Cumberland, where he had charge of breaking up arriving trains and making up new trains to leave the yards.

"Nick" House was a large, husky man weighing some 225 pounds. He was an ardent baseball fan, and sick as he was during the recent World Series he listened to every game wtih keen interest.

For nearly thirty years his life was the railroad, and he had few outside interests other than his home and baseball. He was a member of St. Mary's Church and two railroad organiaztions, the Railroad Clerks and the yardmaster's organiaztion.

He joined the United States Army during the World War but did not reach France.

After the war he promptly resumed his job with the B&O. The railroad was his only employer during his lifetime.

Surviving him is his widow, Mrs. Rose R. House; his father, Charles W. House; and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Umstot, all of Cumberland.

An illness which he was unable to throw off was responsible for his giving up his work just at a time when a business upsweep has caused a great increase of activity in the yard he used to boss.

His home was at 412 South street.

Fix Ridgeley Streets, Says Roosevelt

President Roosevelt today had decided it was high time the streets and alleys of Ridgeley be improved. He approved a $47,689 WPA project to achieve that end.

According to word received from Congressman Jennings Randolph, he has succeeded in convincing the president (and other officials) that the work should be done.

The project is being returned to the state WPA office for action. The improvement program is expected to start soon.
